PREFACE

THERE is something of homage and fitness in producing the poems of Blake in a form which would have appealed to that artist-poet, and in a character—this Florence type—which for him might well have symbolized the birthplace of his hero Michelangelo. True we must relinquish the exquisite designs which Blake interwove with the fabric of his verse, yet there may still be a positive advantage in reading these poems as poetry and nothing more, rather than in viewing them as 'fairy missals' or as 'pictures singing.' Our text too, as the reader may wish to be assured, is a faithful reproduction of the original, unmixed with the seconds of ingenious editors. Every word, as Catherine Blake said of a dearly prized copy of the 'Songs of Innocence,' is Blake's own.

In this edition, besides the songs and lyrics which form the greater part of its content, are included Blake's criticism of art and life in the shape of epigrams and satirical pieces; and his perfervid if heterodox confession of faith, ‘The Everlasting Gospel.’ The lover of Blake therefore will find here all that part of his poetry which may be said to possess a definite metrical form, the writings excluded as without the scope of this series being the earlier and later Prophetic Books and the unfinished ‘French Revolution.’ Consigned to an Appendix are certain verses, which for various reasons it seemed undesirable to range among others written at the same time. In fairness to Blake we should remember that these pieces, written for his own amusement, have been unearthed from MS. sources by other hands, and would probably never have been published by the author himself.

The text here given, which is derived from my Oxford edition of 1905, scrupulously reproduces that of Blake’s printed, manuscript, or engraved books, the correction of a few obvious misprints in the ‘Poetical Sketches’ solely excepted. In the case of poems from the ‘Rossetti MS.,’ several of which were left by the author in rude draft, or with successive attempts at perfection, the final version has been adopted, save where the earlier is manifestly the finer. For these variant readings which shed an instructive light upon Blake’s craftsmanship, the reader may be referred to either of the Oxford editions in which they are given in full.
I have adhered generally to Blake's own spelling, where, as in such words as 'desart,' 'lilly,' 'plow,' 'tyger,' it was also that of his contemporaries, and have followed his use of -d and -ed (here printed 'd and -èd) to distinguish between the elision or accentuation of the final syllable of the preterite. Blake's capitals have been retained wherever they serve an artistic purpose, or emphasize a symbolic phrase, though his inconsistent use of them in MS. poems has necessitated a few insertions and omissions. In the case of the 'Poetical Sketches' where the printer has ruthlessly levelled Blake's majuscules, I have ventured to restore them in accordance with his general practice. The ampersand ('and' per se 'and') occasionally found in the engraved as well as in the MS. poems has been expanded throughout.

One further observation may be made. Since a few of the 'Songs of Experience' as well as several of Blake's later poems are written in the prophetic spirit and symbolic language in which he expresses his mystical creed, it is clear that in editions like the present, the scheme of which forbids explanatory notes, these pieces must present many obscurities to readers unfamiliar with his thought and terminology. Such a poem as 'The Mental Traveller,' in which Blake embodies his doctrine of the mental states through which man’s spirit passes and returns ‘in endless circle,’ would be unintelligible without exegetical notes, and those who would find the key may consult the earlier Oxford edition, in which Blake is made his own interpreter by parallelisms drawn from the greater Prophetic Books. But it remains none the less true that whatever view may be held of the value of Blake’s gospel, his poems must stand or fall by their merit as poetry. Writing to me some years ago of one of the lyrics in the ‘MS. Book,’ ‘My Spectre around me night and day,’ a transatlantic Blake collector observed that, whatever the meaning, and on this he hazarded no opinion, it struck him as ‘a poem written with considerable vim’; and it is probably for this sterling quality that it will find readers, not because of the doctrine of the separation and reunion of the intellectual and affective sides of man’s nature, which Blake intended it to convey.

While the arrangement of the poems here adopted is as far as may be chronological, it must be recognized that we cannot walk day by day with Blake as we may with Keats in the edition of Sir Sidney Colvin. For this there are several reasons. Blake’s poems, excepting a few contained in his letters to friends, are undated, and it is only by inferences drawn from their subject, treatment, and position in the MSS. that they can be assigned to a particular year or period. Even when the year is supplied, as in most of the engraved books, it cannot be accepted unreservedly, since it was Blake's impetuous but misleading practice to begin with the title-page, the date on which in several instances long anticipates the completion of the work. He gives us an Incipit but no Colophon. Thus while the 'Songs of Experience' are dated 1794, a knowledge of the gradual evolution of Blake's symbolism renders it certain that one poem 'To Tirzah' must have been written almost a decade later. The early idyll 'Thel,' with the imprint 'The Author & Printer Will'm Blake, 1789,' has been converted into a Prophetic Book by a supplementary section written in the spirit of the 'Visions of the Daughters,' 1793. So too his 'Gates of Paradise,' engraved in 1793, was re-issued without change of date but with important additions not much earlier than 1810. Furthermore Blake's mode of composition must always be taken into account. Few of his verses were struck off at a blow. Ideas for poems were hastily jotted down in his 'MS. Book,' where they often smouldered for years, some like 'The Tyger' to burst into flame, others to lie there unfinished or undergoing successive changes, or like his quatrain 'The Lilly' to be so retouched in another mood as to assume an entirely different complexion. It is therefore not possible to present Blake's poems in the exact order of their composition, even could this be done without destroying the unity of such collections as the ‘Songs of Innocence,’ the ‘Songs of Experience,’ and the strange medley of the ‘Pickering MS.’ Their sequence may best be indicated by a brief historical account of Blake’s writings, and the sources from which the various sections in this edition have been derived.

William Blake, the son of a London hosier, was born in Golden Square, November 28, 1757, and apprenticed in 1771 to the engraver Basire. Even as a child he saw visions, now of a tree filled with angels, their wings ‘bespangling every bough like stars,’ and again of angelic figures walking among haymakers at their work. Pure vision too are his early poems, composed between his twelfth and twentieth years—one ‘How sweet I roam’d from field to field’ being written before he reached the age of fourteen. These juvenilia, collected in the ‘Poetical Sketches’ of 1783, reflect an impulse derived from the older dramatists, and quickened doubtless by his youthful studies of ‘gothic monuments’ in the Abbey and City churches. More than one of these lyrics might have been torn from the leaves of an Elizabethan song-book, yet they are rebirth rather than imitation. As Malkin his first biographer observes: ‘He has dared to venture on the ancient simplicity; and, feeling it in his own character and manners, has succeeded better than those who have only seen it through a glass.' Blake’s attitude to the feeble poetasters of his own age appears in his address ‘To the Muses,’ and in his scornful reference to the ‘tinkling rhymes and elegances terse’ of decadent Augustans. These early poems we are told were printed at the expense of his well-wishers, the Rev. Henry Mathew and John Flaxman, the sculptor, who presented the sheets to Blake to dispose of as he thought fit. The gift must have been kindly meant, though the manner of it left something to be desired. The patronizing note of Mathew’s ‘Advertisement’ and its apologetic reference to ‘the irregularities and defects to be found in almost every page’ could scarcely have been pleasing to the author. The proofs do not seem to have been submitted to Blake for correction, and the book contains some bad misprints, perhaps among them the much debated ‘beds’ for ‘birds’ in the ‘Mad Song.’ Even the title, which cannot have been of his own coinage, must have proved an added source of offence, since Blake himself used the word ‘sketch,’ as in the lines on ‘Florentine Ingratitude,’ in a contemptuous sense to denote the antithesis of a drawing where ‘every line . . . has meaning.’ It was probably these reasons, as much as the inartistic contrast between the ‘Sketches’ and the books produced by his own illuminated printing, that led Blake to ignore it in his ‘Prospectus’ of October 1793, and to content himself with presenting a very few copies to personal friends. The ‘less partial public’ to whom the Advertisement appealed for reproof or confirmation of the belief that these poems ‘possessed a poetic originality which merited some respite from oblivion’ was thus never given an opportunity of expressing an opinion. The ‘Sketches’ conclude somewhat feebly with four experiments in rhetorical prose, imitative of ‘Ossian’ or the once popular ‘Death of Abel’: none need regret their necessary exclusion here. The two poems ‘Song by a Shepherd’ and ‘Song by an Old Shepherd,’ which I place in square parentheses at the end of the ‘Poetical Sketches,’ are not part of the work as first printed, but are manuscript additions on the fly-leaves of a presentation copy dated May 15, 1784, where they occur beside an early version of the ‘Laughing Song,’ there entitled ‘Song 2d by a Young Shepherd.’

The next of Blake’s writings which has come down to us is the short prose extravaganza called ‘An Island in the Moon,’ an imperfect and unfinished holograph of sixteen foolscap leaves which may be assigned to the year 1784. Placed in the mouths of the various characters are several ditties, three of which I print in the body of the text, and the remainder in the Appendix. Some of these are intentional doggerel, but two at least—the lines on 'Matrimony' and the savage attack on surgery in 'Old Corruption'—are not without merits of their own, and reveal Blake in unwonted moods. Besides these we find in the 'Island' the original versions of the 'Nurse's Song,' 'Holy Thursday,' and 'The Little Boy Lost,' which Blake, five years later, with some changes, incorporated in his 'Songs of Innocence.'

Foreshadowed in this crude satire is Blake's invention of Illuminated Printing, which he first employed in 1788, probably in the two tiny tractates on Natural Religion, and continued to use thenceforward with beautiful effect in the 'Songs' and in the earlier and later Prophetic Books. By this process in 1789 he produced his 'Book of Thel,' which, in its first form, is still a limpid pool untroubled by angels (or demons) of the darker brink. 'Tiriel,' a rather earlier piece in the same fourteen-syllable measure, survived in MS. until printed by Mr. W. M. Rossetti in 1874. The first serious symptom of Blake's mythomania, its chief interest for us is a pathological one.

It was probably in 1789 also that Blake wrote his first book of the 'French Revolution,' a work which, inverting his own phrase, may best be described as history seen 'through, not with, the eye.' This visionary account of the Convocation of the Notables has been preserved for us in a unique proof impression bearing the imprint of the publisher J. Johnson with the date 1791. For some reason, perhaps a political one (for Johnson, the friend of Paine and Godwin, was a person suspect), this Book the First was never published, and the remaining six books, which according to the 'Advertisement' 'are finished and will be published in their Order,' have disappeared, if indeed they ever existed.

In the same year as 'Thel' and with the same delicate and delightful artistry Blake engraved his 'Songs of Innocence,' some few copies of which, printed from thirty-one plates and coloured by his own hand, were issued to private purchasers from time to time during the next few years. These early issues include four songs ('The Little Girl Lost,' 'The Little Girl Found,' 'The Voice of the Ancient Bard,' and 'The Schoolboy'), which later were generally transferred to the 'Songs of Experience.'

In 1790 Blake published his prose 'Marriage of Heaven and Hell,' an amazing counterblast to Swedenborg's 'Wisdom of Angels.' Among the marginal notes in his copy of the English translation of this book published in 1787, we may trace the source of the title in the comment 'Good and Evil are here both Good, and the two contraries Married.'

The years 1792 and 1793 mark a period in Blake's thought characterized by a passionate revolt against any form of restrictive code, and by that darker and estranged outlook on life which finds expression in 'A Song of Liberty' (c. 1792) and the 'Visions of the Daughters of Albion' (1793) as well as in the 'Songs of Experience.' The latter book, a companion volume to the 'Songs of Innocence,' bears the date 1794, though some of the songs, as I have pointed out, must have been engraved later, and many had certainly been written a year or two earlier, since no less than eighteen are found in fair transcript in the 'Rossetti MS.' On the completion of the 'Songs of Experience' Blake added a general title-page: 'Songs of Innocence and of Experience: Shewing the Two Contrary States of the Human Soul,' these two books thenceforward being issued together as a single work. There was, it should be explained, no real edition of this or any other of Blake's engraved books, but separate copies were printed and coloured from time to time, most of them in the last years of Blake's life. Locked up for the most part in private libraries of wealthy book-lovers they won Blake no fame.

The arrangement of the songs differs considerably

in the several impressions. In the Monckton Milnes copy (with the water-mark 1818) Blake supplies an index giving 'The Order in which the "Songs of Innocence and of Experience" ought to be paged and placed.' But this order he did not adhere to himself, and a different one adopted in most of the later issues is followed in the present edition. One song 'A Divine Image,' written as the contrary to the infinitely finer 'The Divine Image' of the 'Songs of Innocence,' though engraved by Blake was never included by him in any copy issued during his lifetime. I place it here in parentheses between 'The Clod and the Pebble' and 'Holy Thursday,' the position suggested by its innocent counterpart.

Next in order, or indeed virtually contemporaneous with the 'Songs of Experience,' are the Earlier Poems from the 'Rossetti MS.,' otherwise known as the 'MS. Book,' a foolscap quarto of fifty-eight leaves, which Blake had used for small designs and drawings since 1790. Three years later, when many of the pages were thus filled, he reversed the volume and converted it into a note-book for poetry. On these leaves, besides the transcripts or first versions of the 'Songs of Experience,' we find a number of short poems, written before the end of the year 1793, which were never engraved or otherwise published during the poet's life. time. Even more explicitly than the 'Songs of Experience' the lyrics in this group are an outcry against 'creeds that refuse and restrain,' and expressly take as their theme the repulse of natural love in the name of conventional morality. To some of the shorter pieces in this section, chiefly quatrains or couplets, I have given the title 'Gnomic Verses,' and with them have included a few others of the same character drawn from other sources. To particularize, nos. xvi.-xxiii. come from the later section of the 'Rossetti MS.,' no. xxiv. from 'Thel,' no. xxv. from 'The Marriage of Heaven and Hell,' and no. xxvi. from 'The Four Zoas.'

We know of no lyrical poems by Blake between 1794 and 1800, during which years he was occupied with the writing and engraving of the seven prophecies known as the Lambeth Books (1793-95), and the composition, transcription, and illustration of the longest of his mystical poems, 'The Four Zoas.' The title-page of this work is dated 1797, though internal evidence proves that the revision of the manuscript was the labour of another six years.

A new era in Blake's life opens in September 1800, when at the invitation of Hayley he removed from Lambeth to a Sussex village. Here, under the 'mild influence of lovely Felpham,' his troubles dropped from his shoulders like Christian's burden. He saw 'happiness stretch’d across the hills.’ He writes to a friend: ‘Heaven opens here on all sides her golden gates: her windows are not obstructed by vapours; voices of celestial inhabitants are more distinctly heard, and their forms more distinctly seen; and my cottage is also a shadow of their houses.’ This spirit of joy and recovered serenity is reflected in the ‘Poems from Letters,’ addressed to the Flaxmans and the Butts (1800-3).

To these three years of spiritual exaltation belong the lyrics contained in the smaller holograph known as the ‘Pickering MS.’ For whom this fair transcript of ten poems was made remains unknown; but it has preserved for us some of Blake’s loveliest verse, as well as some of his most cryptic or crabbed symbolism. Altogether in the variety of its contents it is a singular collection. Two poems, ‘Mary’ and ‘William Bond,’ the latter of which has been supposed by some to refer to an actual occurrence in Blake’s life, are his only attempts at the ballad since the youthful ‘Fair Elenor,’ suggested by Walpole’s ‘Castle of Otranto.’ Underlying the wide compassion of the ‘Auguries of Innocence’ is Blake’s reiterated doctrine that ‘Everything that lives is Holy’—all Forms of Being one and identical in the Divine Humanity. The theme of the opening quatrain, this gift of Innocence which sees a grain of sand as a microcosm, is developed and expanded as Experience in the sixty-four proverb couplets. The order of these proverbs as they appear in the MS. obviously cannot represent Blake's final intention, for—to select a single instance—it is impossible to believe that he would have followed

'A Truth that's told with bad intent
   Beats all the Lies you can invent,'

by

'It is right it should be so;
   Man was made for Joy and Woe.'

With as few transpositions as possible I have rearranged these couplets in such a way as to enable the poem to be read as a continuous whole. I omit here 'The Grey Monk,' a fuller version of which is given among the 'Later Poems from the Rossetti MS.,' and place 'Long John Brown' in the Appendix, where whoso will may seek it.

Soon after his arrival at Felpham Blake again took up his old sketch-book, and now writing from the other end used it during the next decade for jotting down verse and prose. Some of the 'Later Poems from the Rossetti MS.' must have preceded those transcribed in the 'Pickering MS.,' since among the former are the rough drafts of two which form part of the smaller collection. One of these, the 'Monk of Charlemaine,' was afterwards separated by Blake into two pieces, the version engraved as part of ‘Jerusalem,’ and ‘The Grey Monk’ of the ‘Pickering MS.’ The lines ‘I rose up at the dawn of day,’ which were written under and around an entry dated August 1807, may be compared with a note upon another page of the ‘MS. Book’ earlier in the same year: ‘Tuesday Jan⁰ 20, 1807, between two and seven in the evening, Despair.’ The dedicatory verses ‘The Caverns of the Grave’ accompanied Blake’s water-colour painting of The Last Judgement, executed for the Countess of Egremont in 1808. I append here the artist’s dedication ‘To the Queen’ of his Illustrations of Blair’s ‘Grave’ published also in 1808, though no draft of this poem appears in the ‘Rossetti MS.’

It was at Felpham also that Blake fully developed the elaborate symbolism embodied in the revised MS. of ‘The Four Zoas,’ and in the two large engraved prophecies ‘Milton’ and ‘Jerusalem.’ Both these books, the engraving of which was begun on his return to London, bear the date 1804 on the title-page, though ‘Milton’ was not completed until 1809, and ‘Jerusalem’ until 1820. The magnificent lines from ‘Milton’—

‘And did those feet in ancient time
Walk upon England’s mountains green . . .’

xx
which form part of the Preface must therefore have been composed before 1804, when the engraving was begun. The same probably holds true of the lyrics from ‘Jerusalem.’

The epigrams and satirical pieces, which I have here arranged under the headings ‘On Friends and Foes,’ ‘On Art and Artists,’ and ‘Miscellaneous Epigrams,’ display without reserve the ‘contrary side’ of Hayley’s ‘gentle visionary Blake.’ Those in the first section, written in an unhappy period of alienation from his old friends and patrons by whom he considered that he had been misunderstood and ungenerously treated, are all taken from the ‘Rossetti MS.’ and may be dated 1807-10. The group ‘On Art and Artists’ (1808-9) contains nine epigrams found as marginalia in Blake’s copy of Sir Joshua Reynolds’ first eight ‘Discourses’; the remainder, together with the ‘Miscellaneous Epigrams,’ written about the same time, come from the ‘MS. Book.’

Blake’s ‘Gates of Paradise’ in its original form of 1793 was a small book of emblems ‘For Children,’ produced not in illuminated printing but in ordinary intaglio engraving. The conversion of this book into a digest of his symbolic creed was a later idea, carried out in or about 1810. To effect this Blake changed the words ‘For Children’ on the title-page to ‘For the Sexes,’ retouched the plates, altered the legends, and added a Prologue, Epilogue, and descriptive couplets entitled 'The Keys of the Gates.' These verses, as the arabic numerals indicate, are interpretative in their new sense of the sixteen emblematic designs.

Blake’s last and one of his greatest poems, ‘The Everlasting Gospel,’ in its fire and fury suggests a volcano in eruption. It should be read with Swinburne’s commentary which will always remain its noblest appreciation. The scattered passages from which this poem has been pieced together were written for the greater part on blank spaces of partially filled pages in the ‘MS. Book’; others on loose scraps of paper some of which we know to have been lost. As one of these fragments surrounds the draft of Blake’s ‘Additions to his Catalogue of Pictures: For the Year 1810,’ it is clear that ‘The Everlasting Gospel’ cannot have been completed earlier than that date.

The poem consists of eight sections (here numbered i.-viii.), the sequence of which in most cases Blake has himself indicated by catchwords. There are two versions of iii., the longer and revised one being that here adopted. The prologue, epilogue, and sections ii., iii., v. and vi. appear to be complete, but of iv. ‘Did Jesus teach doubt?’ and vii. ‘Seeing this false Christ’ we have only the opening lines.
PREFACE

Henceforth with the exception of the short but majestic prose drama ‘The Ghost of Abel,’ 1822 (suggested by Byron’s ‘Cain’) Blake’s work was entirely pictorial, and it is to these last years of his life that we owe some of his most sublime designs, among them the Illustrations of the Book of Job. Despite attacks of illness he worked to the last, dying at the age of seventy in August 1827.

My thanks are due to the Delegates of the Oxford University Press for their permission to make use of the text contained in my two editions of Blake’s Poems published by them in 1905 and 1913.

POETICAL SKETCHES

TO SPRING

O THOU with dewy locks, who lookest down Thro' the clear windows of the morning, turn Thine angel eyes upon our Western Isle, Which in full choir hails thy approach, O Spring!

The hills tell each other, and the list'ning Valleys hear; all our longing eyes are turned Up to thy bright pavillions: issue forth, And let thy holy feet visit our clime.

Come o'er the Eastern hills, and let our winds Kiss thy perfumèd garments; let us taste Thy morn and evening breath; scatter thy pearls Upon our love-sick land that mourns for thee.

O deck her forth with thy fair fingers; pour Thy soft kisses on her bosom; and put Thy golden crown upon her languish'd head, Whose modest tresses were bound up for thee.
TO SUMMER

O THOU who passest thro' our valleys in
Thy strength, curb thy fierce steeds, allay the heat
That flames from their large nostrils! thou, O Summer,
Oft pitched'st here thy golden tent, and oft
Beneath our oaks hast slept, while we beheld
With joy thy ruddy limbs and flourishing hair.

Beneath our thickest shades we oft have heard
Thy voice, when noon upon his fervid car
Rode o'er the deep of Heaven; beside our springs
Sit down, and in our mossy valleys, on
Some bank beside a river clear, throw thy
Silk draperies off, and rush into the stream:
Our valleys love the Summer in his pride.

Our bards are fam'd who strike the silver wire:
Our youth are bolder than the southern swains:
Our maidens fairer in the sprightly dance:
We lack not songs, nor instruments of joy,
Nor ecchoes sweet, nor waters clear as heaven,
Nor laurel wreaths against the sultry heat.
TO AUTUMN

O AUTUMN, laden with fruit, and stained
With the blood of the grape, pass not, but sit
Beneath my shady roof; there thou may'st rest,
And tune thy jolly voice to my fresh pipe,
And all the daughters of the year shall dance!
Sing now the lusty song of fruits and flowers.

'The narrow bud opens her beauties to
The sun, and love runs in her thrilling veins;
Blossoms hang round the brows of Morning, and Flourish down the bright cheek of modest Eve,
Till clust'ring Summer breaks forth into singing,
And feather'd clouds strew flowers round her head.

'The spirits of the air live on the smells
Of fruit; and Joy, with pinions light, roves round
The gardens, or sits singing in the trees.'
Thus sang the jolly Autumn as he sat;
Then rose, girded himself, and o'er the bleak
Hills fled from our sight; but left his golden load.
TO WINTER

'O WINTER! bar thine adamantine doors: The North is thine; there hast thou built thy dark Deep-founded habitation. Shake not thy roofs, Nor bend thy pillars with thine iron car.'

He hears me not, but o'er the yawning deep Rides heavy; his storms are unchain'd, sheathed In ribbèd steel; I dare not lift mine eyes, For he hath rear'd his sceptre o'er the world.

Lo! now the direful monster, whose skin clings To his strong bones, strides o'er the groaning rocks: He withers all in silence, and in his hand Unclothes the Earth, and freezes up frail life.

He takes his seat upon the cliffs; the mariner Cries in vain. Poor little wretch, that deal'st With storms! till Heaven smiles, and the monster Is driv'n yelling to his caves beneath mount Hecla.
TO THE EVENING STAR

THOU Fair-hair'd Angel of the Evening,
Now, whilst the sun rests on the mountains, light
Thy bright torch of love; thy radiant crown
Put on, and smile upon our evening bed!
Smile on our loves, and while thou drawest the Blue curtains of the sky, scatter thy silver dew
On every flower that shuts its sweet eyes
In timely sleep. Let thy West Wind sleep on
The lake; speak silence with thy glimmering eyes,
And wash the dusk with silver. Soon, full soon,
Dost thou withdraw; then the wolf rages wide,
And the lion glares thro' the dun forest:
The fleeces of our flocks are cover'd with
Thy sacred dew: protect them with thine influence.
TO MORNING

O HOLY Virgin! clad in purest white,
Unlock Heav’n’s golden gates, and issue forth;
Awake the dawn that sleeps in heaven; let light
Rise from the chambers of the East, and bring
The honey’d dew that cometh on waking day.
O radiant Morning, salute the sun
Rouz’d like a huntsman to the chace, and with
Thy buskin’d feet appear upon our hills.
FAIR ELENOR

The bell struck one, and shook the silent tower;
The graves give up their dead: Fair Elenor
Walk'd by the castle gate, and look'd in.
A hollow groan ran thro' the dreary vaults.

She shriek'd aloud, and sunk upon the steps,
On the cold stone her pale cheeks. Sickly smells
Of death issue as from a sepulchre,
And all is silent but the sighing vaults.

Chill Death withdraws his hand, and she revives;
Amaz'd, she finds herself upon her feet,
And, like a ghost, thro' narrow passages
Walking, feeling the cold walls with her hands.

Fancy returns, and now she thinks of bones
And grinning skulls, and corruptible Death
Wrap'd in his shroud; and now fancies she hears
Deep sighs, and sees pale sickly ghosts gliding.

At length, no fancy but reality
Distracts her. A rushing sound, and the feet
Of one that fled, approaches. Ellen stood
Like a dumb statue, froze to stone with fear.
POETICAL SKETCHES

The Wretch approaches, crying: 'The deed is done; Take this, and send it by whom thou wilt send; It is my life; send it to Elenor: He's dead, and howling after me for blood!

'Take this,' he cry'd; and thrust into her arms A wet napkin, wrap'd about; then rush'd Past, howling: she receiv'd into her arms Pale Death, and follow'd on the wings of Fear.

They pass'd swift thro' the outer gate; the Wretch, Howling, leap'd o'er the wall into the moat, Stifling in mud. Fair Ellen pass'd the bridge, And heard a gloomy voice cry 'Is it done?'

As the deer wounded, Ellen flew over The pathless plain; as the arrows that fly By night, destruction flies, and strikes in darkness. She fled from fear, till at her house arriv'd.

Her maids await her; on her bed she falls, That bed of joy, where erst her Lord hath press'd: 'Ah, woman's fear!' she cry'd; 'ah, cursèd Duke! Ah, my dear Lord! ah, wretched Elenor!
‘My Lord was like a flower upon the brows
Of lusty May! Ah, life as frail as flower!
O ghastly Death! withdraw thy cruel hand,
Seek’st thou that flow’r to deck thy horrid temples?

‘My Lord was like a star in highest heav’n
Drawn down to earth by spells and wickedness;
My Lord was like the opening eyes of day
When western winds creep softly o’er the flowers;

‘But he is darken’d; like the summer’s noon
Clouded; fall’n like the stately tree, cut down;
The breath of heaven dwelt among his leaves.
O Elenor, weak woman, fill’d with woe!’

Thus having spoke, she raisèd up her head,
And saw the bloody napkin by her side,
Which in her arms she brought; and now, tenfold
More terrified, saw it unfold itself.

Her eyes were fix’d; the bloody cloth unfolds,
Disclosing to her sight the murder’d head
Of her dear Lord, all ghastly pale, clotted
With gory blood; it groan’d, and thus it spake:
POETICAL SKETCHES

'O Elenor, I am thy husband's head,
Who, sleeping on the stones of yonder tower,
Was 'reft of life by the accursèd Duke!
A hirèd villain turn'd my sleep to death!

'O Elenor, beware the cursèd Duke;
O give not him thy hand, now I am dead;
He seeks thy love; who, coward, in the night,
Hirèd a villain to bereave my life.'

She sat with dead cold limbs, stiffen'd to stone;
She took the gory head up in her arms;
She kiss'd the pale lips; she had no tears to shed;
She hugg'd it to her breast, and groan'd her last.
SONG

HOW sweet I roam'd from field to field
And tasted all the summer's pride,
Till I the Prince of Love beheld
Who in the sunny beams did glide!

He shew'd me lillies for my hair,
And blushing roses for my brow;
He led me through his gardens fair
Where all his golden pleasures grow.

With sweet May dews my wings were wet,
And Phoebus fir'd my vocal rage;
He caught me in his silken net,
And shut me in his golden cage.

He loves to sit and hear me sing,
Then, laughing, sports and plays with me;
Then stretches out my golden wing,
And mocks my loss of liberty.

SONG

My silks and fine array,
My smiles and languish'd air,
By Love are driv'n away;
And mournful lean Despair
Brings me yew to deck my grave:
Such end true lovers have.

His face is fair as heav'n
When springing buds unfold;
O why to him was 't giv'n
Whose heart is wintry cold?
His breast is Love's all-worship'd tomb,
Where all Love's pilgrims come.

Bring me an axe and spade,
Bring me a winding-sheet;
When I my grave have made
Let winds and tempests beat:
Then down I'll lie as cold as clay.
True love doth pass away!

SONG

LOVE and Harmony combine,
And around our souls intwine
While thy branches mix with mine,
And our roots together join.

Joys upon our branches sit,
Chirping loud and singing sweet;
Like gentle streams beneath our feet
Innocence and Virtue meet.

Thou the golden fruit dost bear,
I am clad in flowers fair;
Thy sweet boughs perfume the air,
And the Turtle buildeth there.

There she sits and feeds her young,
Sweet I hear her mournful song;
And thy lovely leaves among,
There is Love, I hear his tongue.

There his charming nest doth lay,
There he sleeps the night away;
There he sports along the day,
And doth among our branches play.
I LOVE the jocund dance,
The softly-breathing song,
Where innocent eyes do glance,
And where lisps the maiden's tongue.

I love the laughing vale,
I love the echoing hill,
Where mirth does never fail,
And the jolly swain laughs his fill.

I love the pleasant cot,
I love the innocent bow'r,
Where white and brown is our lot,
Or fruit in the mid-day hour.

I love the oaken seat,
Beneath the oaken tree,
Where all the old villagers meet,
And laugh our sports to see.

I love our neighbours all,
But, Kitty, I better love thee;
And love them I ever shall;
But thou art all to me.
MEMORY, hither come,
And tune your merry notes:
And, while upon the wind
Your music floats,
I'll pore upon the stream
Where sighing lovers dream,
And fish for fancies as they pass
Within the watery glass.

I'll drink of the clear stream,
And hear the linnet's song;
And there I'll lie and dream
The day along:
And when night comes, I'll go
To places fit for woe,
Walking along the darken'd valley
With silent Melancholy.
POETICAL SKETCHES

MAD SONG

THE wild winds weep,
   And the night is a-cold;
Come hither, Sleep,
And my griefs unfold:
But lo! the Morning peeps
Over the eastern steeps,
And the rustling beds of dawn
The earth do scorn.

Lo! to the vault
Of pavèd Heaven,
With sorrow fraught
My notes are driven:
They strike the ear of night,
Make weep the eyes of day;
They make mad the roaring winds,
And with tempests play.

Like a fiend in a cloud,
With howling woe
After night I do crowd,
And with night will go;
I turn my back to the east
From whence comforts have increas'd;
For light doth seize my brain
With frantic pain.

SONG

FRESH from the dewy hill, the merry year
Smiles on my head and mounts his flaming car;
Round my young brows the laurel wreathes a shade,
And rising glories beam around my head.

My feet are wing'd, while o'er the dewy lawn,
I meet my Maiden risen like the morn:
O bless those holy feet, like angels' feet;
O bless those limbs, beaming with heav'nly light!

Like as an angel glitt'ring in the sky
In times of innocence and holy joy;
The joyful Shepherd stops his grateful song
To hear the music of an angel's tongue.

So when she speaks, the voice of Heaven I hear;
So when we walk, nothing impure comes near;
Each field seems Eden, and each calm retreat;
Each village seems the haunt of holy feet.

But that sweet village where my black-ey'd maid
Closes her eyes in sleep beneath night's shade,
Whene'er I enter, more than mortal fire
Burns in my soul, and does my song inspire.
WHEN early Morn walks forth in sober grey,
Then to my black-ey'd maid I haste away;
When evening sits beneath her dusky bow'r,
And gently sighs away the silent hour,
The village bell alarms, away I go,
And the vale darkens at my pensive woe.

To that sweet village, where my black-ey'd maid
Doth drop a tear beneath the silent shade,
I turn my eyes; and pensive as I go
Curse my black stars and bless my pleasing woe.

Oft when the Summer sleeps among the trees,
Whisp'ring faint murmurs to the scanty breeze,
I walk the village round; if at her side
A youth doth walk in stolen joy and pride,
I curse my stars in bitter grief and woe,
That made my love so high and me so low.

O should she e'er prove false, his limbs I'd tear
And throw all pity on the burning air;
I'd curse bright fortune for my mixèd lot,
And then I'd die in peace and be forgot.
TO THE MUSES

WHETHER on Ida's shady brow,
Or in the chambers of the East,
The chambers of the Sun, that now
From ancient melody have ceas'd;

Whether in Heav'n ye wander fair,
Or the green corners of the earth,
Or the blue regions of the air
Where the melodious winds have birth;

Whether on crystal rocks ye rove,
Beneath the bosom of the sea
Wand'ring in many a coral grove,
Fair Nine, forsaking Poetry!

How have you left the ancient love
That bards of old enjoy'd in you!
The languid strings do scarcely move!
The sound is forc'd, the notes are few!
COME, Kings, and listen to my song:
When Gwin, the son of Nore,
Over the Nations of the North
His cruel sceptre bore;

The Nobles of the land did feed
Upon the hungry Poor;
They tear the poor man’s lamb, and drive
The needy from their door.

‘The land is desolate; our wives
And children cry for bread;
Arise, and pull the tyrant down!
Let Gwin be humbled!’

Gordred the Giant rouz’d himself
From sleeping in his cave;
He shook the hills, and in the clouds
The troubl’d banners wave.
Beneath them roll'd, like tempests black,
The num'rous sons of blood;
Like lions' whelps, roaring abroad,
Seeking their nightly food.

Down Bleron's hills they dreadful rush,
Their cry ascends the clouds;
The trampling horse and clanging arms
Like rushing mighty floods!

Their wives and children, weeping loud,
Follow in wild array,
Howling like ghosts, furious as wolves
In the bleak wintry day.

'Pull down the tyrant to the dust,
Let Gwin be humblèd,'
They cry, 'and let ten thousand lives
Pay for the tyrant's head.'

From tow'r to tow'r the watchmen cry,
'O Gwin, the son of Nore,
Arouse thyself! the Nations, black
Like clouds, come rolling o'er!'
POETICAL SKETCHES

Gwin rear’d his shield, his palace shakes,
His chiefs come rushing round;
Each, like an awful thunder cloud,
With voice of solemn sound:

Like rearèd stones around a grave
They stand around the King;
Then suddenly each seiz’d his spear,
And clashing steel does ring.

The husbandman does leave his plow
To wade thro’ fields of gore;
The merchant binds his brows in steel,
And leaves the trading shore;

The shepherd leaves his mellow pipe,
And sounds the trumpet shrill;
The workman throws his hammer down
To heave the bloody bill.

Like the tall ghost of Barraton
Who sports in stormy sky,
Gwin leads his host—as black as night
When pestilence does fly—
POETICAL SKETCHES

With horses and with chariots;
And all his spearmen bold
March to the sound of mournful song,
Like clouds around him roll’d.

Gwin lifts his hand: the Nations halt;
‘Prepare for war!’ he cries.
Gordred appears! his frowning brow
Troubles our northern skies.

The armies stand, like balances
Held in th’ Almighty’s hand;
‘Gwin, thou has fill’d thy measure up:
Thou’rt swept from out the land.’

And now the raging armies rush’d
Like warring mighty seas;
The Heav’ns are shook with roaring war,
The dust ascend’s the skies!

Earth smokes with blood, and groans and shakes
To drink her children’s gore,
A sea of blood; nor can the eye
See to the trembling shore!

POETICAL SKETCHES

And on the verge of this wild sea
Famine and Death doth cry;
The cries of women and of babes
Over the field doth fly.

The King is seen raging afar,
With all his men of might;
Like blazing comets scattering death
Thro' the red fev'rous night.

Beneath his arm like sheep they die,
And groan upon the plain;
The battle faints, and bloody men
Fight upon hills of slain.

Now Death is sick, and riven men
Labour and toil for life;
Steed rolls on steed, and shield on shield,
Sunk in this sea of strife!

The God of War is drunk with blood;
The earth doth faint and fail;
The stench of blood makes sick the Heav'ns;
Ghosts glut the throat of Hell!
O what have Kings to answer for
Before that awful throne;
When thousand deaths for vengeance cry,
And ghosts accusing groan!

Like blazing comets in the sky
That shake the stars of light,
Which drop like fruit unto the earth
Thro' the fierce burning night;

Like these did Gwin and Gordred meet,
And the first blow decides;
Down from the brow unto the breast
Gordred his head divides!

Gwin fell: the sons of Norway fled,
All that remain'd alive;
The rest did fill the Vale of Death;
For them the eagles strive.

The river Dorman roll'd their blood
Into the Northern Sea;
Who mourn'd his sons, and overwhelm'd
The pleasant south country.
POETICAL SKETCHES

AN IMITATION OF SPENSER

GOLDEN Apollo, that thro' Heaven wide
Scatter'st the rays of light, and Truth's beams,
In lucent words my darkling verses dight,
And wash my earthy mind in thy clear streams,
That Wisdom may descend in fairy dreams,
All while the jocund Hours in thy train
Scatter their fancies at thy poet's feet;
And when thou yield'st to Night thy wide domain,
Let rays of Truth enlight his sleeping brain.

For brutish Pan in vain might thee assay
With tinkling sounds to dash thy nervous verse,
Sound without sense; yet in his rude affray,
(For ignorance is Folly's leasing nurse
And love of Folly needs none other's curse)
Midas the praise hath gain'd of lengthen'd ears,
For which himself might deem him ne'er the worse
To sit in council with his modern peers,
And judge of tinkling rhymes and elegances terse.

And thou, Mercurius, that with wingèd brow
Dost mount aloft into the yielding sky,
And thro’ Heav’n’s halls thy airy flight dost throw,
Entering with holy feet to where on high
Jove weighs the counsel of futurity;
Then, laden with eternal fate, dost go
Down, like a falling star, from autumn sky,
And o’er the surface of the silent deep dost fly:

If thou arrivest at the sandy shore
Where nought but envious hissing adders dwell,
Thy golden rod, thrown on the dusty floor,
Can charm to harmony with potent spell.
Such is sweet Eloquence, that does dispel
Envy and Hate that thirst for human gore;
And cause in sweet society to dwell
Vile savage minds that lurk in onely cell.

O Mercury, assist my lab’ring sense
That round the circle of the world would fly,
As the wing’d eagle scorns the tow’ry fence
Of Alpine hills round his high aëry,
And searches thro’ the corners of the sky,
Sports in the clouds to hear the thunder’s sound,
And see the wingèd lightnings as they fly;
Then, bosom’d in an amber cloud, around
Plumes his wide wings, and seeks Sol’s palace high.
POETICAL SKETCHES

And thou, O Warrior Maid invincible,
Arm'd with the terrors of Almighty Jove,
Pallas, Minerva, maiden terrible,
Lov' st thou to walk the peaceful solemn grove,
In solemn gloom of branches interwove?
Or bear'st thy Ægis o'er the burning field,
Where, like the sea, the waves of battle move?
Or have thy soft piteous eyes beheld
The weary wanderer thro' the desart rove?
Or does th' afflicted man thy heav'nly bosom move?
WHEN silver snow decks Susan's clothes,
And jewel hangs at th' shepherd's nose,
The blushing bank is all my care,
With hearth so red, and walls so fair;
'Heap the sea-coal, come, heap it higher,
The oaken log lay on the fire.'
The well-wash'd stools, a circling row,
With lad and lass, how fair the show!
The merry can of nut-brown ale,
The laughing jest, the love-sick tale,
Till, tir'd of chat, the game begins.
The lasses prick the lads with pins;
Roger from Dolly twitch'd the stool,
She, falling, kiss'd the ground, poor fool!
She blush'd so red, with side-long glance
At hob-nail Dick, who griev'd the chance.
But now for Blind-man's Buff they call;
Of each encumbrance clear the hall.
Jenny her silken 'kerchief folds,
And bleary'd Will the black lot holds.
Now laughing stops with 'Silence! hush!'
And Peggy Pout gives Sam a push.
The Blind-man’s arms, extended wide,
Sam slips between—‘O woe betide
Thee, clumsy Will!’—but titt’ring Kate
Is pen’d up in the corner strait!
And now Will’s eyes beheld the play;
He thought his face was t’other way.
‘Now, Kitty, now! what chance hast thou,
Roger so near thee! Trips, I vow!’
She catches him: then Roger ties
His own head up, but not his eyes;
For thro’ the slender cloth he sees,
And runs at Sam, who slips with ease
His clumsy hold; and, dodging round,
Sukey is tumbled on the ground.
‘See what it is to play unfair!
Where cheating is, there’s mischief there.
But Roger still pursues the chace;
‘He sees! he sees!’ cries softly Grace:
‘O Roger, thou, unskill’d in art,
Must, surer bound, go thro’ thy part.’
Now Kitty, pert, repeats the rhymes,
And Roger turns him round three times,
Then pauses ere he starts; but Dick
Was mischief bent upon a trick;
Down on his hands and knees he lay
Directly in the Blind-man’s way,
POETICAL SKETCHES

Then cries out 'Hem!' Hodge heard, and ran
With hood-wink'd chance, sure of his man;
But down he came. Alas, how frail
Our best of hopes, how soon they fail!
With crimson drops he stains the ground;
Confusion startles all around.
Poor piteous Dick supports his head,
And fain would cure the hurt he made;
But Kitty hasted with a key,
And down his back they strait convey
The cold relief; the blood is stay'd,
And Hodge again holds up his head.
Such are the fortunes of the game,
And those who play should stop the same
By wholesome laws; such as all those
Who on the blinded man impose
Stand in his stead; as, long a-gone,
When men were first a nation grown,
Lawless they liv'd, till wantonness
And liberty began t' increase,
And one man lay in another's way;
Then laws were made to keep fair play.
POETICAL SKETCHES

KING EDWARD THE THIRD

Persons

King Edward. Lord Audley.
Queen Philippa. Bishop.
Sir John Chandos. Peter Blunt, a common Soldier.
Sir Thomas Dagworth.
Sir Walter Manny.

SCENE. The Coast of France. King Edward and Nobles before it. The Army.

King: O thou, to whose fury the nations are
But as dust, maintain thy servant's right!
Without thine aid, the twisted mail, and spear,
And forgèd helm, and shield of seven times beaten brass
Are idle trophies of the vanquisher.
When confusion rages, when the field is in a flame,
When the cries of blood tear horror from Heav'n,
And yelling Death runs up and down the ranks,
Let Liberty, the charter’d right of Englishmen,

POETICAL SKETCHES

Won by our fathers in many a glorious field,
Enervate my soldiers; let Liberty
Blaze in each countenance, and fire the battle.
The enemy fight in chains, invisible chains, but heavy;
Their minds are fetter'd, then how can they be free?
While, like the mounting flame,
We spring to battle o'er the floods of death!
And these fair youths, the flow'r of England,
Venturing their lives in my most righteous cause,
O sheathe their hearts with triple steel, that they
May emulate their fathers' virtues.
And thou, my son, be strong; thou fightest for a crown
That death can never ravish from thy brow,
A crown of glory—but from thy very dust
Shall beam a radiance, to fire the breasts
Of youth unborn! Our names are written equal
In fame's wide-trophied hall; 'tis ours to gild
The letters, and to make them shine with gold
That never tarnishes: whether Third Edward,
Or the Prince of Wales, or Montacute, or Mortimer,
Or ev'n the least by birth, shall gain the brightest fame,
Is in His hand to whom all men are equal.
The world of men are like the num'rous stars
That beam and twinkle in the depth of night,
Each clad in glory according to his sphere;
But we, that wander from our native seats
POETICAL SKETCHES

And beam forth lustre on a darkling world,
Grow larger as we advance: and some, perhaps
The most obscure at home, that scarce were seen
To twinkle in their sphere, may so advance
That the astonish’d world, with upturn’d eyes,
Regardless of the moon, and those that once were bright,
Stand only for to gaze upon their splendor.

[He here knights the Prince, and other young Nobles.
Now let us take a just revenge for those
Brave Lords, who fell beneath the bloody axe
At Paris. Thanks, noble Harcourt, for ’twas
By your advice we landed here in Brittany,
A country not yet sown with destruction,
And where the fiery whirlwind of swift war
Has not yet swept its desolating wing.
Into three parties we divide by day,
And separate march, but join again at night;
Each knows his rank, and Heav’n marshal all.

[Exeunt.

SCENE. English Court. Lionel, Duke of Clarence;
Queen Philippa; Lords; Bishop, &c.

Clarence: My Lords, I have by the advice of her
Whom I am doubly bound to obey, my Parent
And my Sovereign, call’d you together.
My task is great, my burden heavier than
My unfledg'd years;
Yet, with your kind assistance, Lords, I hope
England shall dwell in peace; that, while my father
Toils in his wars, and turns his eyes on this
His native shore, and sees commerce fly round
With his white wings, and sees his golden London
And her silver Thames, throng'd with shining spires
And corded ships, her merchants buzzing round
Like summer bees, and all the golden cities
In his land overflowing with honey,
Glory may not be dimm'd with clouds of care.
Say, Lords, should not our thoughts be first to commerce?
My Lord Bishop, you would recommend us agriculture?
Bishop: Sweet Prince, the arts of Peace are great,
And no less glorious than those of War,
Perhaps more glorious in the philosophic mind.
When I sit at my home, a private man,
My thoughts are on my gardens and my fields,
How to employ the hand that lacketh bread.
If Industry is in my diocese,
Religion will flourish; each man's heart
Is cultivated and will bring forth fruit:
This is my private duty and my pleasure.
But, as I sit in council with my Prince,
My thoughts take in the general good of the whole,
And England is the land favour’d by Commerce;
For Commerce, tho’ the child of Agriculture,
Fosters his parent, who else must sweat and toil,
And gain but scanty fare. Then, my dear Lord,
Be England’s trade our care; and we, as tradesmen,
Looking to the gain of this our native land.

Clarence: O my good Lord, true wisdom drops like honey
From your tongue, as from a worship’d oak.
Forgive, my Lords, my talkative youth, that speaks
Not merely what my narrow observation has
Pick’d up, but what I have concluded from your lessons.
Now, by the Queen’s advice, I ask your leave
To dine to-morrow with the Mayor of London:
If I obtain your leave, I have another boon
To ask, which is the favour of your company.
I fear Lord Percy will not give me leave.

Percy: Dear Sir, a Prince should always keep his state,
And grant his favours with a sparing hand,
Or they are never rightly valuèd.
These are my thoughts: yet it were best to go;
But keep a proper dignity, for now
You represent the sacred person of
Your father; ’tis with Princes as ’tis with the sun;
If not sometimes o’er-clouded, we grow weary
Of his officious glory.
Clarence: Then you will give me leave to shine sometimes, My Lord?

Lord: Thou hast a gallant spirit, which I fear
Will be imposed on by the closer sort. [Aside.

Clarence: Well, I'll endeavour to take
Lord Percy's advice; I have been us'd so much
To dignity that I'm sick on't.

Queen Phil.: Fie, fie, Lord Clarence! you proceed not to business, But speak of your own pleasures.

I hope their Lordships will excuse your giddiness.

Clarence: My Lords, the French have fitted out many Small ships of war, that, like to ravening wolves,
Infest our English seas, devouring all
Our burden'd vessels, spoiling our naval flocks.
The merchants do complain and beg our aid.

Percy: The merchants are rich enough;
Can they not help themselves?

Bishop: They can, and may; but how to gain their will Requires our countenance and help.

Percy: When that they find they must, my Lord, they will:
Let them but suffer awhile, and you shall see
They will bestir themselves.

Bishop: Lord Percy cannot mean that we should suffer
This disgrace: if so, we are not Sovereigns
Of the Sea—our right, that Heaven gave
To England, when at the birth of Nature
POETICAL SKETCHES

She was seated in the deep; the Ocean ceas'd
His mighty roar, and fawning play'd around
Her snowy feet, and own'd his awful Queen.
Lord Percy, if the heart is sick, the head
Must be aggriev'd; if but one member suffer,
The heart doth fail. You say, my Lord, the merchants
Can, if they will, defend themselves against
These rovers: this is a noble scheme,
Worthy the brave Lord Percy, and as worthy
His generous aid to put it into practice.

Percy: Lord Bishop, what was rash in me is wise
In you; I dare not own the plan. 'Tis not Mine. Yet will I, if you please,
Quickly to the Lord Mayor, and work him onward
To this most glorious voyage; on which cast
I'll set my whole estate,
But we will bring these Gallic rovers under.

Queen Phil.: Thanks, brave Lord Percy; you have the thanks
Of England's Queen, and will, ere long, of England. [Exeunt.

SCENE. At Cressy. Sir Thomas Dagworth and Lord Audley meeting.

Audley: Good morrow, brave Sir Thomas; the bright morn
Smiles on our army, and the gallant sun
Springs from the hills like a young hero
Into the battle, shaking his golden locks
Exultingly: this is a promising day.

Dagworth: Why, my Lord Audley, I don't know.
Give me your hand, and now I'll tell you what
I think you do not know. Edward's afraid of Philip.

Audley: Ha! Ha! Sir Thomas! you but joke;
Did you e'er see him fear? At Blanchetaque,
When almost singly he drove six thousand
French from the ford, did he fear then?

Dagworth: Yes, fear—that made him fight so.

Audley: By the same reason I might say 'tis fear
That makes you fight.

Dagworth: Mayhap you may: look upon Edward's face,
No one can say he fears; but when he turns
His back, then I will say it to his face;
He is afraid: he makes us all afraid.
I cannot bear the enemy at my back.
Now here we are at Cressy; where to-morrow,
To-morrow we shall know. I say, Lord Audley,
That Edward runs away from Philip.

Audley: Perhaps you think the Prince too is afraid?

Dagworth: No; God forbid! I'm sure he is not.
He is a young lion. O! I have seen him fight
And give command, and lightning has flashed
From his eyes across the field: I have seen him
Shake hands with Death, and strike a bargain for
The enemy; he has danc'd in the field.
POETICAL SKETCHES

Of battle, like the youth at morris-play,
I’m sure he’s not afraid, nor Warwick, nor none,
None of us but me, and I am very much afraid.
    Audley: Are you afraid too, Sir Thomas?
I believe that as much as I believe
The King’s afraid: but what are you afraid of?
    Dagworth: Of having my back laid open; we turn
Our backs to the fire, till we shall burn our skirts.
    Audley: And this, Sir Thomas, you call fear? Your fear
Is of a different kind then from the King’s;
He fears to turn his face, and you to turn your back.
I do not think, Sir Thomas, you know what fear is.

Enter Sir John Chandos.

    Chandos: Good morrow, Generals; I give you joy:
Welcome to the fields of Cressy. Here we stop,
And wait for Philip.
    Dagworth: I hope so.
    Audley: There, Sir Thomas, do you call that fear?
    Dagworth: I don’t know; perhaps he takes it by fits.
Why, noble Chandos, look you here,
One rotten sheep spoils the whole flock;
And if the bell-wether is tainted, I wish
The Prince may not catch the distemper too.
    Chandos: Distemper, Sir Thomas! what distemper?
I have not heard.
POETICAL SKETCHES

Dagworth: Why, Chandos, you are a wise man, know you understand me; a distemper the King caught here in France of running away.

Audley: Sir Thomas, you say you have caught it too.

Dagworth: And so will the whole army; 'tis very catching, or, when the coward runs, the brave man totters. Perhaps the air of the country is the cause. Feel it coming upon me, so I strive against it; you yet are whole; but after a few more retreats, we all shall know how to retreat better than fight. To be plain, I think retreating too often takes away a soldier's courage.

Chandos: Here comes the King himself: tell him your thoughts plainly, Sir Thomas.

Dagworth: I've told him before, but his disorder makes him deaf.

Enter King Edward and Black Prince.

King: Good morrow, Generals; when English courage fails, down goes our right to France. But we are conquerors everywhere; nothing can stand our soldiers; each man is worthy of a triumph. Such an army of heroes Ne'er shouted to the Heav'ns, nor shook the field. Edward, my son, thou art most happy, having such command: the man
POETICAL SKETCHES

Were base who were not fir'd to deeds
Above heroic, having such examples.

Prince: Sire, with respect and deference I look
Upon such noble souls, and wish myself
Worthy the high command that Heaven and you
Have given me. When I have seen the field glow,
And in each countenance the soul of war
Curb'd by the manliest reason, I have been wing'd
With certain victory; and 'tis my boast,
And shall be still my glory, I was inspir'd
By these brave troops.

Dagworth: Your Grace had better make
Them all generals.

King: Sir Thomas Dagworth, you must have your joke
And shall, while you can fight as you did at
The ford.

Dagworth: I have a small petition to your Majesty.

King: What can Sir Thomas Dagworth ask that Edw
Can refuse?

Dagworth: I hope your Majesty cannot refuse so great
A trifle; I've gilt your cause with my best blood,
And would again, were I not forbid
By him whom I am bound to obey: my hands
Are tièd up, my courage shrunk and wither'd,
My sinews slacken'd, and my voice scarce heard;
Therefore I beg I may return to England.

POETICAL SKETCHES

King: I know not what you could have ask'd, Sir Thomas,
That I would not have sooner parted with
Than such a soldier as you have been, and such a friend:
Nay, I will know the most remote particulars
Of this your strange petition: that, if I can,
I still may keep you here.

Dagworth: Here on the fields of Cressy we are settled
Till Philip springs the tim'rous covey again.
The Wolf is hunted down by causeless fear;
The Lion flees, and fear usurps his heart,
Startled, astonish'd at the clam'rous Cock;
The Eagle, that doth gaze upon the sun,
Fears the small fire that plays about the fen.
If, at this moment of their idle fear,
The Dog doth seize the Wolf, the Forester the Lion,
The Negro in the crevice of the rock
Doth seize the soaring Eagle; undone by flight,
They tame submit: such the effect flight has
On noble souls. Now hear its opposite:
The tim'rous Stag starts from the thicket wild,
The fearful Crane springs from the splashy fen,
The shining Snake glides o'er the bending grass;
The Stag turns head and bays the crying Hounds,
The Crane o'ertaken fighteth with the Hawk,
The Snake doth turn, and bite the padding foot.
And if your Majesty's afraid of Philip,
POETICAL SKETCHES

You are more like a Lion than a Crane:
Therefore I beg I may return to England.

King: Sir Thomas, now I understand your mirth,
Which often plays with Wisdom for its pastime,
And brings good counsel from the breast of laughter.
I hope you'll stay, and see us fight this battle,
And reap rich harvest in the fields of Cressy;
Then go to England, tell them how we fight,
And set all hearts on fire to be with us.
Philip is plum'd, and thinks we flee from him,
Else he would never dare to attack us. Now,
Now the quarry's set! and Death doth sport
In the bright sunshine of this fatal day.

Dagworth: Now my heart dances, and I am as light
As the young bridegroom going to be married.
Now must I to my soldiers, get them ready,
Furbish our armours bright, new plume our helms;
And we will sing like the young housewives busied
In the dairy: my feet are wing'd, but not
For flight, an please your Grace.

King: If all my soldiers are as pleas'd as you,
'Twill be a gallant thing to fight or die;
Then I can never be afraid of Philip.

Dagworth: A raw-bon'd fellow t'other day pass'd by
I told him to put off his hungry looks.
He answer'd me 'I hunger for another battle.'
POETICAL SKETCHES

I saw a little Welshman with a fiery face;
I told him he look'd like a candle half
Burn'd out; he answer'd he was 'pig enough
To light another pattle.' Last night, beneath
The moon I walk'd abroad, when all had pitch'd
Their tents, and all were still;
I heard a blooming youth singing a song
He had compos'd, and at each pause he wip'd
His dropping eyes. The ditty was 'If he
Return'd victorious, he should wed a maiden
Fairer than snow, and rich as midsummer.'
Another wept, and wish'd health to his father.
I chid them both, but gave them noble hopes.
These are the minds that glory in the battle,
And leap and dance to hear the trumpet sound.

King: Sir Thomas Dagworth, be thou near our person;
Thy heart is richer than the vales of France:
I will not part with such a man as thee.
If Philip came arm'd in the ribs of Death,
And shook his mortal dart against my head,
Thou'dst laugh his fury into nerveless shame!
Go now, for thou art suited to the work,
Throughout the camp; enflame the timorous,
Blow up the sluggish into ardour, and
Confirm the strong with strength, the weak inspire,
And wing their brows with hope and expectation:

POETICAL SKETCHES

Then to our tent return, and meet to council. [Exit Dagwor

Chandos: That man's a hero in his closet, and more
A hero to the servants of his house
Than to the gaping world; he carries windows
In that enlarged breast of his, that all
May see what's done within.

Prince: He is a genuine Englishman, my Chandos,
And hath the spirit of Liberty within him.
Forgive my prejudice, Sir John; I think
My Englishmen the bravest people on
The face of the earth.

Chandos: Courage, my Lord, proceeds from self-depend

Teach man to think he's a free agent,
Give but a slave his liberty, he'll shake
Off sloth, and build himself a hut, and hedge
A spot of ground; this he'll defend; 'tis his
By right of Nature: thus set in action,
He will still move onward to plan conveniences,
Till glory fires his breast to enlarge his castle;
While the poor slave drudges all day, in hope
To rest at night.

King: O Liberty, how glorious art thou!
I see thee hov'ring o'er my army, with
Thy wide-stretch'd plumes; I see thee
Lead them on to battle;
I see thee blow thy golden trumpet, while
POETICAL SKETCHES

Thy sons shout the strong shout of victory!
O noble Chandos, think thyself a gardener,
My son a vine, which I commit unto
Thy care: prune all extravagant shoots, and guide
Th’ ambitious tendrils in the paths of wisdom;
Water him with thy advice; and Heav’n
Rain fresh’ning dew upon his branches! And,
O Edward, my dear son! learn to think lowly of Thyself, as we may all each prefer other:
’Tis the best policy, and ’tis our duty. [Exit King Edward.

Prince: And may our duty, Chandos, be our pleasure.
Now we are alone, Sir John, I will unburden,
And breathe my hopes into the burning air,
Where thousand Deaths are posting up and down,
Commission’d to this fatal field of Cressy.
Methinks I see them arm my gallant soldiers,
And gird the sword upon each thigh, and fit
Each shining helm, and string each stubborn bow,
And dance to the neighing of our steeds.
Methinks the shout begins, the battle burns;
Methinks I see them perch on English crests,
And roar the wild flame of fierce war upon
The throngèd enemy! In truth I am too full:
It is my sin to love the noise of war.
Chandos, thou seest my weakness; strong Nature
Will bend or break us: my blood, like a springtide,
POETICAL SKETCHES

Does rise so high to overflow all bounds
Of moderation; while Reason, in her
Frail bark, can see no shore or bound for vast Ambition. Come, take the helm, my Chandos,
That my full-blown sails overset me not
In the wild tempest: condemn my ’venturous youth,
That plays with danger, as the innocent child
Unthinking plays upon the viper’s den:
I am a coward in my reason, Chandos.

Chandos: You are a man, my Prince, and a brave man,
If I can judge of actions; but your heat
Is the effect of youth, and want of use:
Use makes the armèd field and noisy War
Pass over as a summer cloud, unregarded,
Or but expected as a thing of course.
Age is contemplative; each rolling year
Brings forth fruit to the mind’s treasure-house:
While vacant Youth doth crave and seek about
Within itself, and findeth discontent,
Then, tired of thought, impatient takes the wing,
Seizes the fruits of time, attacks experience,
Roams round vast Nature’s forest, where no bounds
Are set, the swiftest may have room, the strongest
Find prey; till tired at length, sated and tired
With the changing sameness, old variety,
We sit us down, and view our former joys
With distaste and dislike.

Prince: Then, if we must tug for experience,
Let us not fear to beat round Nature's wilds,
And rouze the strongest prey: then, if we fall,
We fall with glory. I know the wolf
Is dangerous to fight, not good for food,
Nor is the hide a comely vestment; so
We have our battle for our pains. I know
That Youth has need of Age to point fit prey,
And oft the stander-by shall steal the fruit
Of th' other's labour. This is philosophy;
These are the tricks of the world; but the pure soul
Shall mount on native wings, disdaining
Little sport, and cut a path into the heaven of glory,
Leaving a track of light for men to wonder at.
I'm glad my father does not hear me talk;
You can find friendly excuses for me, Chandos.
But do you not think, Sir John, that if it please
Th' Almighty to stretch out my span of life,
I shall with pleasure view a glorious action
Which my youth master'd?

Chandos: Considerate Age, my Lord, views motives,
And not acts; when neither warbling voice
Nor trilling pipe is heard, nor pleasure sits
With trembling age, the voice of Conscience then,
Sweeter than music in a summer's eve,
POETICAL SKETCHES

Shall warble round the snowy head, and keep
Sweet symphony to feather'd angels, sitting
As guardians round your chair; then shall the pulse
Beat slow, and taste and touch and sight and sound and smell,
That sing and dance round Reason's fine-wrought throne,
Shall flee away, and leave them all forlorn;
Yet not forlorn if Conscience is his friend.  [Exeun

SCENE. In Sir Thomas Dagworth's Tent.
            Dagworth, and William his Man.

Dagworth: Bring hither my armour, William.
Ambition is the growth of ev'ry clime.
    William: Does it grow in England, Sir?
Dagworth: Aye, it grows most in lands most cultivated.
    William: Then it grows most in France; the vines here are finer than any we have in England.
Dagworth: Aye, but the oaks are not.
    William: What is the tree you mentioned? I don't think I ever saw it.
Dagworth: Ambition.
    William: Is it a little creeping root that grows in ditches
Dagworth: Thou dost not understand me, William.
It is a root that grows in every breast;
Ambition is the desire or passion that one man
Has to get before another, in any pursuit after glory;
But I don't think you have any of it.

52
POETICAL SKETCHES

William: Yes, I have; I have a great ambition to know everything, Sir.

Dagworth: But when our first ideas are wrong, what follows must all be wrong, of course; 'tis best to know a little, and to know that little aright.

William: Then, Sir, I should be glad to know if it was not ambition that brought over our King to France to fight for his right?

Dagworth: Tho' the knowledge of that will not profit thee much, yet I will tell you that it was ambition.

William: Then, if ambition is a sin, we are all guilty in coming with him, and in fighting for him.

Dagworth: Now, William, thou dost thrust the question home; but I must tell you that, guilt being an act of the mind, none are guilty but those whose minds are prompted by that same ambition.

William: Now, I always thought that a man might be guilty of doing wrong without knowing it was wrong.

Dagworth: Thou art a natural philosopher, and knowest truth by instinct, while reason runs aground, as we have run our argument. Only remember, William, all have it in their power to know the motives of their own actions, and 'tis a sin to act without some reason.

William: And whoever acts without reason may do a great deal of harm without knowing it.

Dagworth: Thou art an endless moralist.
POETICAL SKETCHES

William: Now there's a story come into my head, that I will tell your honour if you'll give me leave.

Dagworth: No, William, save it till another time; this is no time for story-telling. But here comes one who is as entertaining as a good story!

Enter Peter Blunt.

Peter: Yonder's a musician going to play before the King; it's a new song about the French and English; and the Prince has made the minstrel a 'squire, and given him I don't know what, and I can't tell whether he don't mention us all one by one; and he is to write another about all us that are to die, that we may be remembered in Old England, for all our blood and bones are in France; and a great deal more that we shall all hear by and by; and I came to tell your honour, because you love to hear war-songs.

Dagworth: And who is this minstrel, Peter, dost know?

Peter: O aye, I forgot to tell that; he has got the same name as Sir John Chandos, that the Prince is always with — the wise man that knows us all as well as your honour, only ain't so good-natured.

Dagworth: I thank you, Peter, for your information; but not for your compliment, which is not true. There's as much difference between him and me as between glittering sand and fruitful mould; or shining glass and a wrought diamond, set in rich gold, and fitted to the finger of an Emperor; such is that worthy Chandos.

Peter: I know your honour does not think anything of yourself, but everybody else does.

Dagworth: Go, Peter, get you gone; flattery is delicious, even from the lips of a babbler. [Exit Peter.

William: I never flatter your honour.

Dagworth: I don't know that.

William: Why, you know, Sir, when we were in England, at the tournament at Windsor, and the Earl of Warwick was tumbled over, you ask'd me if he did not look well when he fell; and I said No, he look'd very foolish; and you was very angry with me for not flattering you.

Dagworth: You mean that I was angry with you for not flattering the Earl of Warwick. [Exeunt.

SCENE. Sir Thomas Dagworth's Tent. Sir Thomas Dagworth: to him enter Sir Walter Manny.

Sir Walter: Sir Thomas Dagworth, I have been weeping over the men that are to die to-day.

Dagworth: Why, brave Sir Walter, you or I may fall.

Sir Walter: I know this breathing flesh must lie and rot, cover'd with silence and forgetfulness.

Death wins in cities' smoke, and in still night,
When men sleep in their beds, walketh about!
How many in walled cities lie and groan,
Turning themselves upon their beds,
Talking with Death, answering his hard demands!
How many walk in darkness, terrors are round
The curtains of their beds, destruction is Ready at the door! How many sleep
In earth, cover'd with stones and deathy dust,
Resting in quietness, whose spirits walk
Upon the clouds of heaven, to die no more!
Yet death is terrible, tho' borne on angels' wings.
How terrible then is the field of Death,
Where he doth rend the vault of Heaven,
And shake the gates of Hell!
O Dagworth, France is sick! the very sky,
Tho' sunshine light it, seems to me as pale
As the pale fainting man on his death-bed,
Whose face is shown by light of sickly taper.
It makes me sad and sick at very heart,
Thousands must fall to-day.

Dagworth: Thousands of souls must leave this prison-house
To be exalted to those heavenly fields,
Where songs of triumph, palms of victory,
Where peace and joy and love and calm content
Sit singing in the azure clouds, and strew
Flowers of Heaven's growth over the banquet-table.
POETICAL SKETCHES

Bind ardent Hope upon your feet like shoes,
Put on the robe of preparation,
The table is prepar'd in shining Heaven,
The flowers of Immortality are blown;
Let those that fight fight in good steadfastness,
And those that fall shall rise in victory.

Sir Walter: I’ve often seen the burning field of war,
And often heard the dismal clang of arms;
But never, till this fatal day of Cressy,
Has my soul fainted with these views of death.
I seem to be in one great charnel-house,
And seem to scent the rotten carcasses;
I seem to hear the dismal yells of Death,
While the black gore drops from his horrid jaws;
Yet I not fear the monster in his pride—
But O! the souls that are to die to-day!

Dagworth: Stop, brave Sir Walter; let me drop a tear,
Then let the clarion of war begin;
I’ll fight and weep, ’tis in my Country’s cause;
I’ll weep and shout for glorious Liberty.

Grim War shall laugh and shout, deckèd in tears,
And blood shall flow like streams across the meadows,
That murmur down their pebbly channels, and
Spend their sweet lives to do their Country service:
Then shall England’s verdure shoot, her fields shall smile,
Her ships shall sing across the foaming sea,
Her mariners shall use the flute and viol,
And rattling guns, and black and dreary War,
Shall be no more.

Sir Walter: Well, let the trumpet sound, and the drum beat,
Let war stain the blue heavens with bloody banners;
I'll draw my sword, nor ever sheathe it up
Till England blow the trump of victory,
Or I lay stretch'd upon the field of death.

SCENE. In the Camp. Several of the Warriors meet at the King's Tent with a Minstrel, who sings the following Song:

O sons of Trojan Brutus, cloth'd in war,
Whose voices are the thunder of the field,
Rolling dark clouds o'er France, muffling the sun
In sickly darkness like a dim eclipse,
Threatening as the red brow of storms, as fire
Burning up Nations in your wrath and fury!

Your ancestors came from the fires of Troy,
(Like lions rouz'd by lightning from their dens,
Whose eyes do glare against the stormy fires),
Heated with war, fill'd with the blood of Greeks,
With helmets hewn, and shields covered with gore,
In navies black, broken with wind and tide:
They landed in firm array upon the rocks
Of Albion; they kiss'd the rocky shore;
'Be thou our mother and our nurse,' they said;
'Our children's mother, and thou shalt be our grave,
The sepulchre of ancient Troy, from whence
Shall rise cities, and thrones, and arms, and awful pow'rs.'

Our fathers swarm from the ships. Giant voices
Are heard from the hills, the enormous Sons
Of Ocean run from rocks and caves, wild men,
Naked and roaring like lions, hurling rocks,
And wielding knotty clubs, like oaks entangled
Thick as a forest, ready for the axe.

Our fathers move in firm array to battle;
The savage monsters rush like roaring fire,
Like as a forest roars with crackling flames,
When the red lightning, borne by furious storms,
Lights on some woody shore; the parchèd heavens
Rain fire into the molten raging sea.

The smoking trees are strewn upon the shore,
Spoil'd of their verdure. O how oft have they
Defy'd the storm that howlèd o'er their heads!
Our fathers, sweating, lean on their spears, and view
The mighty dead: giant bodies streaming blood,
Dread visages frowning in silent death.
POETICAL SKETCHES

Then Brutus spoke, inspir'd; our fathers sit
Attentive on the melancholy shore:
Hear ye the voice of Brutus: 'The flowing waves
Of time come rolling o'er my breast,' he said;
'And my heart labours with futurity:
Our sons shall rule the Empire of the Sea.

'Their mighty wings shall stretch from East to West.
Their nest is in the sea, but they shall roam
Like eagles for the prey; nor shall the young
Crave or be heard; for plenty shall bring forth,
Cities shall sing, and vales in rich array
Shall laugh, whose fruitful laps bend down with fulness.

'Our sons shall rise from thrones in joy,
Each one buckling on his armour; Morning
Shall be prevented by their swords gleaming,
And Evening hear their song of victory:
Their towers shall be built upon the rocks,
Their daughters shall sing, surrounded with shining spe.

'Liberty shall stand upon the cliffs of Albion,
Casting her blue eyes over the green ocean;
Or, tow'ring, stand upon the roaring waves,
Stretching her mighty spear o'er distant lands;
While, with her eagle wings, she covereth
Fair Albion's shore, and all her families.'

60
FOR a voice like thunder, and a tongue
To drown the throat of war! When the senses
Are shaken, and the soul is driven to madness,
Who can stand? When the souls of the oppressed
Fight in the troubled air that rages, who can stand?
When the whirlwind of fury comes from the Throne of God, when the frowns of his countenance
Drive the nations together, who can stand?
When Sin claps his broad wings over the battle,
And sails rejoicing in the flood of Death;
When souls are torn to everlasting fire,
And fiends of Hell rejoice upon the slain,
O who can stand? O who hath causèd this?
O who can answer at the throne of God?
The Kings and Nobles of the Land have done it!
Hear it not, Heaven, thy Ministers have done it!
A WAR SONG TO ENGLISHMEN

PREPARE, prepare the iron helm of War,
Bring forth the lots, cast in the spacious orb;
Th' Angel of Fate turns them with mighty hands,
And casts them out upon the darken'd earth!

Prepare, prepare!

Prepare your hearts for Death's cold hand! prepare
Your souls for flight, your bodies for the earth;
Prepare your arms for glorious victory;
Prepare your eyes to meet a holy God!

Prepare, prepare!

Whose fatal scroll is that? Methinks 'tis mine!
Why sinks my heart, why faltereth my tongue?
Had I three lives, I'd die in such a cause,
And rise, with ghosts, over the well-fought field.

Prepare, prepare!

The arrows of Almighty God are drawn!
Angels of Death stand in the low'ring heavens!
Thousands of souls must seek the realms of light,
And walk together on the clouds of heaven!

Prepare, prepare!
POETICAL SKETCHES

Soldiers, prepare! Our cause is Heaven’s cause;
Soldiers, prepare! Be worthy of our cause:
Prepare to meet our fathers in the sky:
Prepare, O troops, that are to fall to-day!
    Prepare, prepare!

Alfred shall smile, and make his harp rejoice;
The Norman William, and the learnèd Clerk,
And Lion Heart, and black-brow’d Edward, with
His loyal Queen, shall rise, and welcome us!
    Prepare, prepare!
[SONG BY A SHEPHERD]

WELCOME, stranger, to this place,
Where Joy doth sit on every bough,
Paleness flies from every face;
We reap not what we do not sow.

Innocence doth like a rose
Bloom on every maiden's cheek;
Honour twines around her brows,
The jewel Health adorns her neck.]
POETICAL SKETCHES

[SONG BY AN OLD SHEPHERD]

WHEN silver snow decks Sylvio’s clothes,
And jewel hangs at shepherd’s nose,
We can abide Life’s pelting storm,
That makes our limbs quake, if our hearts be warm.

Whilst Virtue is our walking-staff,
And Truth a lantern to our path,
We can abide Life’s pelting storm,
That makes our limbs quake, if our hearts be warm.

Blow, boisterous Wind, stern Winter frown,
Innocence is a Winter’s gown.
So clad, we’ll abide Life’s pelting storm,
That makes our limbs quake, if our hearts be warm.]

THE SONG OF PHEBE AND JELLCIOE

PHEBE drest like beauty's Queen,
Jellicoe in faint pea-green,
Sitting all beneath a grot,
Where the little lambkins trot.

Maidens dancing, loves a-sporting,
All the country folks a-courting,
Susan, Johnny, Bob, and Joe,
Lightly tripping on a row.

Happy people, who can be
In happiness compar'd with ye?
The Pilgrim with his crook and hat
Sees your happiness compleat.
THIS city and this country has brought forth many mayors
To sit in state, and give forth laws out of their old oak chair
With face as brown as any nut with drinking of strong ale—
Good English hospitality, O then it did not fail!

With scarlet gowns and broad gold lace, would make a yeoman swoon
With stockings roll'd above their knees and shoes as black as jet
With eating beef and drinking beer, O they were stout and hale
Good English hospitality, O then it did not fail!

Thus sitting at the table wide the Mayor and Aldermen
Were fit to give law to the city; each ate as much as ten:
The hungry poor enter'd the hall to eat good beef and ale—
Good English hospitality, O then it did not fail!
LEAVE, O leave [me] to my sorrows;
Here I'll sit and fade away,
Till I'm nothing but a spirit,
And I lose this form of clay.

Then if chance along this forest
Any walk in pathless ways,
Thro' the gloom he'll see my shadow
Hear my voice upon the breeze.

SONGS OF INNOCENCE

INTRODUCTION

PIPING down the valleys wild,
Piping songs of pleasant glee,
On a cloud I saw a child,
And he laughing said to me:

'Pipe a song about a Lamb!'
So I piped with merry cheer.
'Piper, pipe that song again;'
So I piped: he wept to hear.

'Drop thy pipe, thy happy pipe;
Sing thy songs of happy cheer:"
So I sang the same again,
While he wept with joy to hear.

'Piper, sit thee down and write
In a book, that all may read.'
So he vanish'd from my sight,
And I pluck'd a hollow reed,
And I made a rural pen,
And I stain'd the water clear,
And I wrote my happy songs
Every child may joy to hear.
HOW sweet is the Shepherd's sweet lot!
From the morn to the evening he strays;
He shall follow his sheep all the day,
And his tongue shall be fillèd with praise.

For he hears the lamb's innocent call,
And he hears the ewe's tender reply;
He is watchful while they are in peace,
For they know when their Shepherd is nigh.
SONGS OF INNOCENCE

THE ECCHOING GREEN

The Sun does arise,
And make happy the skies;
The merry bells ring
To welcome the Spring;
The skylark and thrush,
The birds of the bush,
Sing louder around
To the bells' cheerful sound,
While our sports shall be seen
On the Ecchoing Green.

Old John, with white hair,
Does laugh away care,
Sitting under the oak,
Among the old folk.
They laugh at our play,
And soon they all say:
'Such, such were the joys
When we all, girls and boys,
In our youth-time were seen
On the Ecchoing Green.'
SONGS OF INNOCENCE

Till the little ones, weary,
No more can be merry;
The sun does descend,
And our sports have an end.
Round the laps of their mothers
Many sisters and brothers,
Like birds in their nest,
Are ready for rest,
And sport no more seen
On the darkening Green.
SONGS OF INNOCENCE

THE LAMB

LITTLE Lamb, who made thee?
Dost thou know who made thee?
Gave thee life, and bid thee feed,
By the stream and o'er the mead;
Gave thee clothing of delight,
Softest clothing, woolly, bright;
Gave thee such a tender voice,
Making all the vales rejoice?
Little Lamb, who made thee?
Dost thou know who made thee?

Little Lamb, I'll tell thee,
Little Lamb, I'll tell thee:
He is callèd by thy name,
For He calls Himself a Lamb.
He is mèek, and He is mild;
He became a little child.
I a child, and thou a lamb,
We are callèd by His name.
Little Lamb, God bless thee!
Little Lamb, God bless thee!

SONGS OF INNOCENCE

THE LITTLE BLACK BOY

My mother bore me in the southern wild,
And I am black, but O! my soul is white;
White as an angel is the English child,
But I am black, as if bereav'd of light.

My mother taught me underneath a tree,
And, sitting down before the heat of day,
She took me on her lap and kissèd me,
And, pointing to the east, began to say:

'Look on the rising sun; there God does live,
And gives his light, and gives his heat away;
And flowers and trees and beasts and men receive
Comfort in morning, joy in the noonday.

'And we are put on earth a little space,
That we may learn to bear the beams of love;
And these black bodies and this sunburnt face
Is but a cloud, and like a shady grove.

'For when our souls have learn'd the heat to bear,
The cloud will vanish; we shall hear his voice,
Saying: "Come out from the grove, my love and care,
And round my golden tent like lambs rejoice."'
SONGS OF INNOCENCE

Thus did my mother say, and kissèd me;
And thus I say to little English boy.
When I from black and he from white cloud free,
And round the tent of God like lambs we joy,

I'll shade him from the heat, till he can bear
To lean in joy upon our Father's knee;
And then I'll stand and stroke his silver hair,
And be like him, and he will then love me.
THE BLOSSOM

MERRY, Merry Sparrow!
Under leaves so green,
A happy Blossom
Sees you, swift as arrow,
Seek your cradle narrow
Near my bosom.

Pretty, Pretty Robin!
Under leaves so green,
A happy Blossom
Hears you sobbing, sobbing,
Pretty, Pretty Robin,
Near my bosom.
WHEN my mother died I was very young,
And my father sold me while yet my tongue
Could scarcely cry 'weep! 'weep! 'weep! 'weep!
So your chimneys I sweep, and in soot I sleep.

There's little Tom Dacre, who cried when his head,
That curl'd like a lamb's back, was shav'd: so I said
'Hush, Tom! never mind it, for when your head's bare
You know that the soot cannot spoil your white hair.'

And so he was quiet, and that very night,
As Tom was a-sleeping, he had such a sight!
That thousands of sweepers, Dick, Joe, Ned, and Jack,
Were all of them lock'd up in coffins of black.

And by came an Angel who had a bright key,
And he open'd the coffins and set them all free;
Then down a green plain leaping, laughing, they run,
And wash in a river, and shine in the Sun.
SONGS OF INNOCENCE

Then naked and white, all their bags left behind,
They rise upon clouds and sport in the wind;
And the Angel told Tom, if he'd be a good boy,
He'd have God for his father, and never want joy.

And so Tom awoke; and we rose in the dark,
And got with our bags and our brushes to work.
Tho' the morning was cold, Tom was happy and warm;
So if all do their duty they need not fear harm.
THE LITTLE BOY LOST

'FATHER! father! where are you going?
O do not walk so fast.
Speak, father, speak to your little boy,
Or else I shall be lost.'

The night was dark, no father was there;
The child was wet with dew;
The mire was deep, and the child did weep,
And away the vapour flew.
THE LITTLE BOY FOUND

The little boy lost in the lonely fen,
Led by the wand'ring light,
Began to cry; but God, ever nigh,
Appear'd like his father, in white.

He kissèd the child, and by the hand led,
And to his mother brought,
Who in sorrow pale, thro' the lonely dale,
Her little boy weeping sought.
LAUGHING SONG

WHEN the green woods laugh with the voice of joy,
And the dimpling stream runs laughing by;
When the air does laugh with our merry wit,
And the green hill laughs with the noise of it;

When the meadows laugh with lively green,
And the grasshopper laughs in the merry scene,
When Mary and Susan and Emily
With their sweet round mouths sing ‘Ha, Ha, He!’

When the painted birds laugh in the shade,
Where our table with cherries and nuts is spread,
Come live, and be merry, and join with me,
To sing the sweet chorus of ‘Ha, Ha, He!’
SONGS OF INNOCENCE

A CRADLE SONG

Sweet dreams, form a shade
O'er my lovely infant's head;
Sweet dreams of pleasant streams
By happy, silent, moony beams.

Sweet sleep, with soft down
Weave thy brows an infant crown.
Sweet sleep, Angel mild,
Hover o'er my happy child.

Sweet smiles, in the night
Hover over my delight;
Sweet smiles, Mother's smiles,
All the livelong night beguiles.

Sweet moans, dovelike sighs,
Chase not slumber from thy eyes.
Sweet moans, sweeter smiles,
All the dovelike moans beguiles.

Sleep, sleep, happy child,
All creation slept and smil'd;
Sleep, sleep, happy sleep,
While o'er thee thy mother weep.
SONGS OF INNOCENCE

Sweet babe, in thy face
Holy image I can trace.
Sweet babe, once like thee,
Thy Maker lay and wept for me,

Wept for me, for thee, for all,
When He was an infant small.
Thou his image ever see,
Heavenly face that smiles on thee,

Smiles on thee, on me, on all;
Who became an infant small.
Infant smiles are his own smiles;
Heaven and earth to peace beguiles.
TO Mercy, Pity, Peace, and Love
All pray in their distress;
And to these virtues of delight
Return their thankfulness.

For Mercy, Pity, Peace, and Love
Is God, our Father dear,
And Mercy, Pity, Peace, and Love
Is man, his child and care.

For Mercy has a human heart,
Pity a human face,
And Love, the human form divine,
And Peace, the human dress.

Then every man, of every clime,
That prays in his distress,
Prays to the human form divine,
Love, Mercy, Pity, Peace.

And all must love the human form,
In Heathen, Turk, or Jew;
Where Mercy, Love, and Pity dwell
There God is dwelling too.
HOLY THURSDAY

'Twas on a Holy Thursday, their innocent faces clean,
The children walking two and two, in red and blue and green,
Ey-headed beadles walk'd before, with wands as white as snow,
'Tl into the high dome of Paul's they like Thames' waters flow.

What a multitude they seem'd, these flowers of London town!
Leis'd in companies they sit with radiance all their own.
Fie hum of multitudes was there, but multitudes of lambs,
Thousands of little boys and girls raising their innocent hands.

W'like a mighty wind they raise to Heaven the voice of song,
W'like harmonious thunderings the seats of Heaven among.
Under them sit the aged men, wise guardians of the poor;
En cherish pity, lest you drive an angel from your door.
SONGS OF INNOCENCE

NIGHT

THE sun descending in the west,
The evening star does shine;
The birds are silent in their nest,
And I must seek for mine.
The moon, like a flower,
In heaven’s high bower,
With silent delight
Sits and smiles on the night.

Farewell, green fields and happy groves,
Where flocks have took delight.
Where lambs have nibbled, silent moves
The feet of angels bright;
Unseen they pour blessing,
And joy without ceasing,
On each bud and blossom,
And each sleeping bosom.

They look in every thoughtless nest,
Where birds are cover’d warm;
They visit caves of every beast,
To keep them all from harm.
If they see any weeping
That should have been sleeping,
They pour sleep on their head,
And sit down by their bed.
SONGS OF INNOCENCE

When wolves and tygers howl for prey,
They pitying stand and weep,
Seeking to drive their thirst away,
And keep them from the sheep.
But if they rush dreadful,
The angels, most heedful,
Receive each mild spirit,
New worlds to inherit.

And there the lion’s ruddy eyes
Shall flow with tears of gold,
And pitying the tender cries,
And walking round the fold,
Saying ‘Wrath, by his meekness,
And, by his health, sickness
Is driven away
From our immortal day.

‘And now beside thee, bleating lamb,
I can lie down and sleep;
Or think on Him who bore thy name,
Graze after thee and weep.
For, wash’d in life’s river,
My bright mane for ever
Shall shine like the gold
As I guard o’er the fold.’
SPRING

SOUND the Flute!
Now it's mute.
Birds delight
Day and Night;
Nightingale
In the dale,
Lark in sky,
Merrily,
Merrily, Merrily, to welcome in the Year.

Little Boy,
Full of joy;
Little Girl,
Sweet and small;
Cock does crow,
So do you;
Merry voice,
Infant noise,
Merrily, Merrily, to welcome in the Year.
SONGS OF INNOCENCE

Little Lamb,
Here I am;
Come and lick
My white neck;
Let me pull
Your soft wool;
Let me kiss
Your soft face:
Merrily, Merrily, we welcome in the Year.
WHEN the voices of children are heard on the green,
And laughing is heard on the hill,
My heart is at rest within my breast,
And everything else is still.

‘Then come home, my children, the sun is gone down,
And the dews of night arise;
Come, come, leave off play, and let us away
Till the morning appears in the skies.’

‘No, no, let us play, for it is yet day,
And we cannot go to sleep;
Besides, in the sky the little birds fly,
And the hills are all cover’d with sheep.’

‘Well, well, go and play till the light fades away,
And then go home to bed.’
The little ones leapèd and shouted and laugh’d
And all the hills echoèd.
INFANT JOY

'I HAVE no name:
I am but two days old.'
What shall I call thee?
'I happy am,
Joy is my name.'
Sweet joy befall thee!

Pretty Joy!
Sweet Joy, but two days old.
Sweet Joy I call thee:
Thou dost smile,
I sing the while,
Sweet joy befall thee!
A DREAM

ONCE a dream did weave a shade
O'er my Angel-guarded bed,
That an Emmet lost its way
Where on grass methought I lay.

Troubled, 'wilder'd, and forlorn,
Dark, benighted, travel-worn,
Over many a tangled spray,
All heart-broke I heard her say:

'O, my children! do they cry?
Do they hear their father sigh?
Now they look abroad to see:
Now return and weep for me.'

Pitying, I drop'd a tear;
But I saw a glow-worm near,
Who replied: 'What wailing wight
Calls the watchman of the night?'

'I am set to light the ground,
While the beetle goes his round:
Follow now the beetle's hum;
Little wanderer, hie thee home.'
SONGS OF INNOCENCE

ON ANOTHER'S SORROW

Can I see another's woe,
   And not be in sorrow too?
Can I see another's grief,
   And not seek for kind relief?

Can I see a falling tear,
   And not feel my sorrow's share?
Can a father see his child
   Weep, nor be with sorrow fill'd?

Can a mother sit and hear
   An infant groan, an infant fear?
No, no! never can it be!
   Never, never can it be!

And can He who smiles on all
   Hear the wren with sorrows small,
   Hear the small bird's grief and care,
   Hear the woes that infants bear,

And not sit beside the nest,
   Pouring pity in their breast;
   And not sit the cradle near,
   Weeping tear on infant's tear;
SONGS OF INNOCENCE

And not sit both night and day,
Wiping all our tears away?
O, no! never can it be!
Never, never can it be!

He doth give his joy to all;
He becomes an infant small;
He becomes a man of woe;
He doth feel the sorrow too.

Think not thou canst sigh a sigh,
And thy Maker is not by;
Think not thou canst weep a tear,
And thy Maker is not near.

O! He gives to us his joy
That our grief He may destroy;
Till our grief is fled and gone
He doth sit by us and moan.

INTRODUCTION

HEAR the voice of the Bard!
Who Present, Past, and Future, sees;
Whose ears have heard
The Holy Word
That walk’d among the ancient trees,

Calling the lapsèd Soul,
And weeping in the evening dew;
That might controll
The starry pole,
And fallen, fallen light renew!

'O Earth, O Earth, return!
Arise from out the dewy grass;
Night is worn,
And the morn
Rises from the slumberous mass.

'Turn away no more;
Why wilt thou turn away?
The starry floor,
The wat’ry shore,

EARTH'S ANSWER

Earth rais'd up her head
From the darkness dread and drear.
Her light fled,
Stony dread!
And her locks cover'd with grey despair.

'Prison'd on wat'ry shore,
Starry Jealousy does keep my den:
Cold and hoar,
Weeping o'er,
I hear the Father of the Ancient Men.

'Selfish Father of Men!
Cruel, jealous, selfish Fear!
Can Delight,
Chain'd in night,
The virgins of youth and morning bear?

'Does spring hide its joy
When buds and blossoms grow?
Does the sower
Sow by night,
Or the plowman in darkness plow?
SONGS OF EXPERIENCE

‘Break this heavy chain
That does freeze my bones around.
Selfish! vain!
Eternal bane!

SONGS OF EXPERIENCE

THE CLOD AND THE PEBBLE

‘LOVE seeketh not Itself to please,
Nor for itself hath any care,
But for another gives its ease,
And builds a Heaven in Hell’s despair.’

So sung a little Clod of Clay,
Trodden with the cattle’s feet,
But a Pebble of the brook
Warbled out these metres meet:

‘Love seeketh only Self to please,
To bind another to Its delight,
Joys in another’s loss of ease,
And builds a Hell in Heaven’s despite.’
[A DIVINE IMAGE]

CRUELTY has a human heart,
And Jealousy a human face;
Terror the human form divine,
And Secrecy the human dress.

The human dress is forgèd iron,
The human form a fiery forge,
The human face a furnace seal’d,
The human heart its hungry gorge.]
HOLY THURSDAY

Is this a holy thing to see
In a rich and fruitful land,
Babes reduc'd to misery,
Fed with cold and usurious hand?

Is that trembling cry a song?
Can it be a song of joy?
And so many children poor?
It is a land of poverty!

And their sun does never shine,
And their fields are bleak and bare,
And their ways are fill'd with thorns:
It is eternal winter there.

For where'er the sun does shine,
And where'er the rain does fall,
Babe can never hunger there,
Nor poverty the mind appall.
SONGS OF EXPERIENCE

THE LITTLE GIRL LOST

IN futurity
I prophetic see
That the earth from sleep
(Grave the sentence deep)

Shall arise and seek
For her Maker meek;
And the desart wild
Become a garden mild.

In the southern clime,
Where the summer's prime
Never fades away,
Lovely Lyca lay.

Seven summers old
Lovely Lyca told;
She had wander'd long
Hearing wild birds' song.

'Sweet sleep, come to me
Underneath this tree.
Do father, mother, weep?
Where can Lyca sleep?
SONGS OF EXPERIENCE

‘Lost in desart wild
Is your little child.
How can Lyca sleep
If her mother weep?

‘If her heart does ake
Then let Lyca wake;
If my mother sleep,
Lyca shall not weep.

‘Frowning, frowning night,
O'er this desart bright,
Let thy moon arise
While I close my eyes.'

Sleeping Lyca lay
While the beasts of prey,
Come from caverns deep,
View'd the maid asleep.

The kingly lion stood,
And the virgin view'd;
Then he gambol'd round
O'er the hallow'd ground.
SONGS OF EXPERIENCE

Leopards, tygers, play
Round her as she lay,
While the lion old
Bow'd his mane of gold,

And her bosom lick,
And upon her neck
From his eyes of flame
Ruby tears there came;

While the lioness
Loos'd her slender dress,
And naked they convey'd
To caves the sleeping maid.
THE LITTLE GIRL FOUND

All the night in woe
Lyca's parents go
Over valleys deep,
While the desarts weep.

Tired and woe-begone,
Hoarse with making moan,
Arm in arm seven days
They trac'd the desart ways.

Seven nights they sleep
Among shadows deep,
And dream they see their child
Starv'd in desart wild.

Pale, thro' pathless ways
The fancied image strays
Famish'd, weeping, weak,
With hollow piteous shriek.
SONGS OF EXPERIENCE

Rising from unrest,
The trembling woman prest
With feet of weary woe:
She could no further go.

In his arms he bore
Her, arm'd with sorrow sore;
Till before their way
A couching lion lay.

Turning back was vain:
Soon his heavy mane
Bore them to the ground.
Then he stalk'd around,

Smelling to his prey;
But their fears allay
When he licks their hands,
And silent by them stands.

They look upon his eyes
Fill'd with deep surprise;
And wondering behold
A spirit arm'd in gold.
SONGS OF EXPERIENCE

On his head a crown;
On his shoulders down
Flow'd his golden hair.
Gone was all their care.

'Follow me,' he said;
'Weep not for the maid;
In my palace deep
Lyca lies asleep.'

Then they followed
Where the vision led,
And saw their sleeping child
Among tygers wild.

To this day they dwell
In a lonely dell;
Nor fear the wolfish howl
Nor the lions' growl.
THE CHIMNEY SWEEPER

A LITTLE black thing among the snow,
Crying 'weep! 'weep!' in notes of woe!
‘Where are thy father and mother, say?’ —
‘They are both gone up to the Church to pray.

‘Because I was happy upon the heath,
And smil’d among the winter’s snow,
They clothèd me in the clothes of death,
And taught me to sing the notes of woe.

‘And because I am happy and dance and sing,
They think they have done me no injury,
And are gone to praise God and his Priest and King,
Who make up a Heaven of our misery.’
NURSE’S SONG

WHEN the voices of children are heard on the green,
And whisp’rings are in the dale,
The days of my youth rise fresh in my mind,
My face turns green and pale.

Then come home, my children, the sun is gone down,
And the dews of night arise;
Your spring and your day are wasted in play,
And your winter and night in disguise.
THE SICK ROSE

O ROSE, thou art sick!
The invisible worm,
That flies in the night,
In the howling storm,

Has found out thy bed
Of crimson joy;
And his dark secret love
Does thy life destroy.
THE FLY

LITTLE Fly,
Thy summer's play
My thoughtless hand
Has brush'd away.

Am not I
A fly like thee?
Or art not thou
A man like me?

For I dance,
And drink, and sing,
Till some blind hand
Shall brush my wing.

If thought is life
And strength and breath,
And the want
Of thought is death;

Then am I
A happy fly,
If I live
Or if I die.
THE ANGEL

I DREAMT a Dream! what can it mean?
And that I was a maiden Queen,
Guarded by an Angel mild:
Witless woe was ne'er beguil'd!

And I wept both night and day,
And he wip'd my tears away,
And I wept both day and night,
And hid from him my heart's delight.

So he took his wings and fled;
Then the morn blush'd rosy red;
I dried my tears, and arm'd my fears
With ten thousand shields and spears.

Soon my Angel came again:
I was arm'd, he came in vain;
For the time of youth was fled,
And grey hairs were on my head.
THE TYGER

TYGER! Tyger! burning bright
In the forests of the night,
What immortal hand or eye
Could frame thy fearful symmetry?

In what distant deeps or skies
Burnt the fire of thine eyes?
On what wings dare he aspire?
What the hand dare seize the fire?

And what shoulder, and what art,
Could twist the sinews of thy heart?
And when thy heart began to beat,
What dread hand? and what dread feet?

What the hammer? what the chain?
In what furnace was thy brain?
What the anvil? what dread grasp
Dare its deadly terrors clasp?
SONGS OF EXPERIENCE

When the stars threw down their spears,
And water'd heaven with their tears,
Did he smile his work to see?
Did He who made the Lamb make thee?

Tyger! Tyger! burning bright
In the forests of the night,
What immortal hand or eye,
Dare frame thy fearful symmetry?
MY PRETTY ROSE TREE

A FLOWER was offer'd to me,
Such a flower as May never bore;
But I said 'I've a pretty Rose Tree,'
And I passèd the sweet flower o'er.

Then I went to my pretty Rose Tree,
To tend her by day and by night,
But my Rose turn'd away with jealousy,
And her thorns were my only delight.
AH! SUNFLOWER

AH, Sunflower! weary of time,
Who countest the steps of the Sun;
Seeking after that sweet golden clime,
Where the traveller’s journey is done;

Where the Youth pined away with desire,
And the pale Virgin shrouded in snow,
Arise from their graves, and aspire
Where my Sunflower wishes to go.
SONGS OF EXPERIENCE

THE LILLY

THE modest Rose puts forth a thorn,
The humble Sheep a threat'ning horn;
While the Lilly white shall in Love delight,
Nor a thorn, nor a threat, stain her beauty bright.
WENT to the Garden of Love,
And saw what I never had seen:
A Chapel was built in the midst,
Where I used to play on the green.

And the gates of this Chapel were shut,
And 'Thou shalt not' writ over the door;
So I turn'd to the Garden of Love
That so many sweet flowers bore;

And I saw it was fillèd with graves,
And tomb-stones where flowers should be;
And Priests in black gowns were walking their rounds,
And binding with briars my joys and desires.
SONGS OF EXPERIENCE

THE LITTLE VAGABOND

DEAR Mother, dear Mother, the Church is cold,
But the Ale-house is healthy and pleasant and warm;
Besides I can tell where I am used well,
Such usage in Heaven will never do well.

But if at the Church they would give us some Ale,
And a pleasant fire our souls to regale,
We'd sing and we'd pray all the livelong day,
Nor ever once wish from the Church to stray.

Then the Parson might preach, and drink, and sing,
And we'd be as happy as birds in the spring;
And modest Dame Lurch, who is always at Church,
Would not have bandy children, nor fasting, nor birch.

And God, like a father, rejoicing to see
His children as pleasant and happy as He,
Would have no more quarrel with the Devil or the Barrel,
But kiss him, and give him both drink and apparel.
SONGS OF EXPERIENCE

LONDON

I WANDER thro' each charter'd street,
Near where the charter'd Thames does flow,
And mark in every face I meet
Marks of weakness, marks of woe.

In every cry of every Man,
In every Infant's cry of fear,
In every voice, in every ban,
The mind-forg'd manacles I hear.

How the Chimney-sweeper's cry
Every black'ning Church appalls;
And the hapless Soldier's sigh
Runs in blood down Palace walls.

But most thro' midnight streets I hear
How the youthful Harlot's curse
Blasts the new-born Infant's tear,
And blights with plagues the Marriage hearse.
THE HUMAN ABSTRACT

PITY would be no more
If we did not make somebody Poor;
And Mercy no more could be
If all were as happy as we.

And mutual Fear brings peace,
Till the selfish loves increase:
Then Cruelty knits a snare,
And spreads his baits with care.

He sits down with holy fears,
And waters the ground with tears;
Then Humility takes its root
Underneath his foot.

Soon spreads the dismal shade
Of Mystery over his head;
And the Catterpillar and fly
Feed on the Mystery.
SONGS OF EXPERIENCE

And it bears the fruit of Deceit,
Ruddy and sweet to eat;
And the Raven his nest has made
In its thickest shade.

The Gods of the earth and sea
Sought thro' Nature to find this Tree;
But their search was all in vain:
There grows one in the Human Brain.
SONGS OF EXPERIENCE

INFANT SORROW

My mother groan'd, my father wept,
Into the dangerous world I leapt;
Helpless, naked, piping loud,
Like a fiend hid in a cloud.

Struggling in my father's hands,
Striving against my swadling-bands,
Bound and weary, I thought best
To sulk upon my mother's breast.
I was angry with my friend:
I told my wrath, my wrath did end.
I was angry with my foe:
I told it not, my wrath did grow.

And I water'd it in fears,
Night and morning with my tears;
And I sunnèd it with smiles,
And with soft deceitful wiles.

And it grew both day and night,
Till it bore an apple bright;
And my foe beheld it shine,
And he knew that it was mine,

And into my garden stole
When the night had veil'd the pole:
In the morning glad I see
My foe outstretch'd beneath the tree.
A LITTLE BOY LOST

'NOUGHT loves another as itself,
Nor venerates another so,
Nor is it possible to Thought
A greater than itself to know:

'And, Father, how can I love you
Or any of my brothers more?
I love you like the little bird
That picks up crumbs around the door.'

The Priest sat by and heard the child,
In trembling zeal he seiz'd his hair:
He led him by his little coat,
And all admir'd the priestly care.

And standing on the altar high,
'Lo! what a fiend is here,' said he,
'One who sets reason up for judge
Of our most holy Mystery.'
SONGS OF EXPERIENCE

The weeping child could not be heard,
The weeping parents wept in vain;
They strip'd him to his little shirt,
And bound him in an iron chain;

And burn'd him in a holy place,
Where many had been burn'd before:
The weeping parents wept in vain.
Are such things done on Albion's shore?
A LITTLE GIRL LOST

Children of the Future Age,
Reading this indignant page,
Know that in a former time,
Love, sweet Love, was thought a crime!

IN the Age of Gold,
Free from winter's cold,
Youth and maiden bright
To the holy light,
Naked in the sunny beams delight.

Once a youthful pair,
Fill'd with softest care,
Met in garden bright
Where the holy light
Had just remov'd the curtains of the night.

There, in rising day,
On the grass they play;
Parents were afar,
Strangers came not near,
And the maiden soon forgot her fear.

SONGS OF EXPERIENCE

Tired with kisses sweet,
They agree to meet
When the silent sleep
Waves o'er heaven's deep,
And the weary tired wanderers weep.

To her father white
Came the maiden bright;
But his loving look,
Like the holy book,
All her tender limbs with terror shook.

‘Ona! pale and weak!
To thy father speak:
O! the trembling fear,
O! the dismal care,
That shakes the blossoms of my hoary hair!
SONGS OF EXPERIENCE

TO TIRZAH

Whate'er is born of Mortal Birth
Must be consumèd with the Earth,
To rise from Generation free:
Then what have I to do with thee?

The Sexes sprung from Shame and Pride,
Blow'd in the morn; in evening died;
But Mercy chang'd Death into Sleep;
The Sexes rose to work and weep.

Thou, Mother of my Mortal part,
With cruelty didst mould my Heart,
And with false self-deceiving tears
Didst bind my Nostrils, Eyes, and Ears;

Didst close my Tongue in senseless clay,
And me to Mortal Life betray.
The Death of Jesus set me free:
Then what have I to do with thee?
THE SCHOOLBOY

I love to rise in a summer morn
When the birds sing on every tree;
The distant huntsman winds his horn,
And the skylark sings with me.
O! what sweet company.

But to go to school in a summer morn,
O! it drives all joy away;
Under a cruel eye outworn,
The little ones spend the day
In sighing and dismay.

Ah! then at times I drooping sit,
And spend many an anxious hour,
Nor in my book can I take delight,
Nor sit in learning’s bower,
Worn thro’ with the dreary shower.

How can the bird that is born for joy
Sit in a cage and sing?
How can a child, when fears annoy,
But droop his tender wing,
And forget his youthful spring?
SONGS OF EXPERIENCE

O! father and mother, if buds are nip'd
And blossoms blown away,
And if the tender plants are strip'd
Of their joy in the springing day,
By sorrow and care's dismay,

How shall the summer arise in joy,
Or the summer fruits appear?
Or how shall we gather what griefs destroy,
Or bless the mellowing year,
When the blasts of winter appear?
THE VOICE OF THE ANCIENT BARD

YOUTH of delight, come hither,
And see the opening morn,
Image of truth new-born.
Doubt is fled, and clouds of reason,
Dark disputes and artful teasing.
Folly is an endless maze,
Tangled roots perplex her ways.
How many have fallen there!
They stumble all night over bones of the dead,
And feel they know not what but care,
And wish to lead others, when they should be led.

NEVER SEEK TO TELL THY LOVE

NEVER seek to tell thy love,
Love that never told can be;
For the gentle wind does move
Silently, invisibly.

I told my love, I told my love,
I told her all my heart;
Trembling, cold, in ghastly fears,
Ah! she doth depart.

Soon as she was gone from me,
A traveller came by,
Silently, invisibly:
He took her with a sigh.
I LAID ME DOWN UPON A BANK

I LAID me down upon a bank,
Where Love lay sleeping;
I heard among the rushes dank
Weeping, Weeping.

Then I went to the heath and the wild,
To the thistles and thorns of the waste;
And they told me how they were beguil'd,
Driven out, and compel'd to be chaste.
I SAW A CHAPEL ALL OF GOLD

I saw a Chapel all of gold
That none did dare to enter in,
And many weeping stood without,
Weeping, mourning, worshipping.

I saw a Serpent rise between
The white pillars of the door,
And he forc'd and forc'd and forc'd;
Down the golden hinges tore,

And along the pavement sweet,
Set with pearls and rubies bright,
All his shining length he drew,
Till upon the altar white

Vomiting his poison out
On the Bread and on the Wine.
So I turn'd into a sty,
And laid me down among the swine.
I ASKÈD A THIEF

I ASKÈD a thief to steal me a peach:
He turnèd up his eyes.
I ask'd a lithe lady to lie her down:
Holy and meek, she cries.

As soon as I went
An Angel came:
He wink'd at the thief,
And smil'd at the dame;

And without one word said
Had a peach from the tree,
And still as a maid
Enjoy'd the lady.
I HEARD AN ANGEL SINGING

I HEARD an Angel singing
When the day was springing:
'Mercy, Pity, Peace
Is the world's release.'

Thus he sang all day
Over the new-mown hay,
Till the sun went down,
And haycocks lookèd brown.

I heard a Devil curse
Over the heath and the furze:
'Mercy could be no more
If there was nobody poor,

'And Pity no more could be,
If all were as happy as we.'
At his curse the sun went down,
And the heavens gave a frown.

[Down pour'd the heavy rain
Over the new reap'd grain;
And Misery's increase
Is Mercy, Pity, Peace.]

A CRADLE SONG

SLEEP! Sleep! beauty bright,
Dreaming o'er the joys of night;
Sleep! Sleep! in thy sleep
Little sorrows sit and weep.

Sweet Babe, in thy face
Soft desires I can trace,
Secret joys and secret smiles,
Little pretty infant wiles.

As thy softest limbs I feel,
Smiles as of the morning steal
O'er thy cheek, and o'er thy breast
Where thy little heart does rest.

O! the cunning wiles that creep
In thy little heart asleep.
When thy little heart does wake
Then the dreadful lightnings break,

From thy cheek and from thy eye,
O'er the youthful harvests nigh.
Infant wiles and infant smiles
Heaven and Earth of peace beguiles.
SILENT, SILENT NIGHT

SILENT, silent Night,
Quench the holy light
Of thy torches bright;

For possess’d of Day,
Thousand spirits stray
That sweet joys betray.

Why should joys be sweet
Usèd with deceit,
Nor with sorrows meet?

But an honest joy
Does itself destroy
For a harlot coy.
I FEAR'D THE FURY OF MY WIND

I FEAR'D the fury of my wind
Would blight all blossoms fair and true;
And my sun it shin'd and shin'd,
And my wind it never blew.

But a blossom fair or true
Was not found on any tree;
For all blossoms grew and grew
Fruitless, false, tho' fair to see.
INFANT SORROW

My mother groan'd, my father wept;
Into the dangerous world I leapt,
Helpless, naked, piping loud,
Like a fiend hid in a cloud.

Struggling in my father's hands,
Striving against my swadling-bands,
Bound and weary, I thought best
To sulk upon my mother's breast.

When I saw that rage was vain,
And to sulk would nothing gain,
Turning many a trick and wile
I began to soothe and smile.

And I sooth'd day after day,
Till upon the ground I stray;
And I smil'd night after night,
Seeking only for delight.
And I saw before me shine
Clusters of the wand’ring vine;
And, beyond, a Myrtle-tree
Stretch’d its blossoms out to me.

But a Priest with holy look,
In his hands a holy book,
Pronounced curses on his head
Who the fruits or blossoms shed.

I beheld the Priest by night;
He embrac’d my Myrtle bright:
I beheld the Priest by day,
Where beneath my vines he lay.

Like a serpent in the day
Underneath my vines he lay:
Like a serpent in the night
He embrac’d my Myrtle bright.

So I smote him, and his gore
Stain’d the roots my Myrtle bore;
But the time of youth is fled,
And grey hairs are on my head.
WHY SHOULD I CARE FOR THE MEN OF THAMES

WHY should I care for the men of Thames,
Or the cheating waves of charter'd streams;
Or shrink at the little blasts of fear
That the hireling blows into my ear?

Tho' born on the cheating banks of Thames,
Tho' his waters bathèd my infant limbs,
The Ohio shall wash his stains from me:
I was born a slave, but I go to be free!
THOU Hast A Lap Full Of Seed

THOU hast a lap full of seed,
And this is a fine country.
Why dost thou not cast thy seed,
And live in it merrily?

Shall I cast it on the sand
And turn it into fruitful land?
For on no other ground
Can I sow my seed,
Without tearing up
Some stinking weed.
TO MY MYRTLE

To a lovely Myrtle bound,
Blossoms show'ring all around,
O how sick and weary I
Underneath my Myrtle lie!

Why should I be bound to thee
O my lovely Myrtle-tree?
[Love, free love, cannot be bound
To any tree that grows on ground.]
WHY art thou silent and invisible,
Father of Jealousy?
Why dost thou hide thyself in clouds
From every searching eye?

Why darkness and obscurity
In all thy words and laws,
That none dare eat the fruit but from
The wily Serpent’s jaws?
Or is it because Secresy gains females’ loud applause?
ARE not the joys of morning sweeter
Than the joys of night?
And are the vig'rous joys of youth
Ashamed of the light?

Let age and sickness silent rob
The vineyards in the night;
But those who burn with vig'rous youth
Pluck fruits before the light.
THE WILD FLOWER'S SONG

As I wander'd the forest,
The green leaves among,
I heard a Wild Flower
Singing a song.

'I slept in the Earth
In the silent night,
I murmur'd my fears
And I felt delight.

'In the morning I went,
As rosy as morn,
To seek for new Joy;
But I met with scorn.'
THE sun arises in the East,
Cloth’d in robes of blood and gold;
Swords and spears and wrath increast
All around his bosom roll’d,
Crown’d with warlike fires and raging desires.
COME hither, my Sparrows,
My little arrows.
If a tear or a smile
Will a man beguile,
If an amorous delay
Clouds a sunshiny day,
If the step of a foot
Smites the heart to its root,
'Tis the marriage-ring
Makes each fairy a king.'

So a Fairy sung.
From the leaves I sprung;
He leap'd from the spray
To flee away;
But in my hat caught,
He soon shall be taught.
Let him laugh, let him cry,
He's my Butterfly;
For I've pull'd out the sting
Of the marriage-ring.
MOTTO TO THE SONGS OF INNOCENCE
AND OF EXPERIENCE

The Good are attracted by Men's perceptions,
And think not for themselves;
Till Experience teaches them to catch
And to cage the Fairies and Elves.

And then the Knave begins to snarl,
And the Hypocrite to howl;
And all his good Friends show their private ends,
And the Eagle is known from the Owl.

[LAFAYETTE]

‘LET the Brothels of Paris be opened
With many an alluring dance,
To awake the physicians thro’ the city!’
Said the beautiful Queen of France.

The King awoke on his couch of gold,
As soon as he heard these tidings told:
‘Arise and come, both fife and drum,
And the Famine shall eat both crust and crumb.’

The Queen of France just touch’d this globe,
And the Pestilence darted from her robe;
But our good Queen quite grows to the ground,
And a great many suckers grow all around.

Fayette beside King Lewis stood;
He saw him sign his hand;
And soon he saw the Famine rage
About the fruitful land.

Fayette beheld the Queen to smile
And wink her lovely eye;
And soon he saw the Pestilence
From street to street to fly.

160
THE ROSSETTI MS.

Fayette beheld the King and Queen
In curses and iron bound;
But mute Fayette wept tear for tear,
And guarded them around.

Fayette, Fayette, thou’rt bought and sold
And sold is thy happy morrow;
Thou gavest the tears of Pity away
In exchange for the tears of Sorrow.

Who will exchange his own fireside
For the stone of another’s door?
Who will exchange his wheaten loaf
For the links of a dungeon-floor?

O who would smile on the wintry seas
And pity the stormy roar?
Or who will exchange his new-born child
For the dog at the wintry door?
A FAIRY leapt upon my knee
Singing and dancing merrily;
I said, 'Thou thing of patches, rings,
Pins, necklaces, and such-like things,
Disgracer of the female form,
Thou paltry, gilded, poisonous worm!'
Weeping, he fell upon my thigh,
And thus in tears did soft reply:
'Knowest thou not, O Fairies' lord!
How much by us contemn'd, abhorr'd,
Whatever hides the female form
That cannot bear the mortal storm?
Therefore in pity still we give
Our lives to make the female live;
And what would turn into disease
We turn to what will joy and please.'

THE harvest shall flourish in wintry weather
When two Virginities meet together:
The King and the Priest must be tied in a tether
Before two Virgins can meet together.

But if once you let the ripe moment go,
You can never wipe off the tears of woe.

[From ‘The Four Zoas’]

TILL thou dost conquer the distrest,

Angels stand round my spirit in Heaven; the blessèd of Heaven are my friends upon Earth.
When Flaxman was taken to Italy, Fuseli was given to me for a season;
And now Flaxman hath given me Hayley, his friend, to be mine—such my lot upon Earth!
Now my lot in the Heavens is this: Milton lov'd me in childhood and show'd me his face;
Ezra came with Isaiah the Prophet, but Shakespeare in riper years gave me his hand;
Paracelsus and Behmen appear'd to me; terrors appear'd in the Heavens above;
The American War began; all its dark horrors pass'd before my face
Across the Atlantic to France; then the French Revolution commenc'd in thick clouds;
And my Angels have told me that, seeing such visions,
I could not subsist on the Earth,
But by my conjunction with Flaxman, who knows to forgive nervous fear.
TO MY DEAR FRIEND, MRS. ANNA FLAXMAN

THIS song to the flower of Flaxman’s joy,
   To the blossom of hope for a sweet decoy;
Do all that you can, or all that you may,
   To entice him to Felpham and far away.

Away to sweet Felpham, for Heaven is there;
The Ladder of Angels descends thro’ the air;
On the turret its spiral does softly descend,
Thro’ the village then winds, at my cot it does end.

You stand in the village and look up to Heaven;
The precious stones glitter on flights seventy-seven;
And my brother is there, and my friend and thine
Descend and ascend with the bread and the wine.

The bread of sweet thought and the wine of delight
Feed the village of Felpham by day and by night,
And at his own door the bless’d Hermit does stand,
Dispensing unceasing to all the wide land.
[TO THOMAS BUTTS]

To my Friend Butts I write
My first Vision of Light,
On the yellow sands sitting.
The Sun was emitting
His glorious beams
From Heaven's high streams.
Over sea, over land,
My eyes did expand
Into regions of air,
Away from all care;
Into regions of fire,
Remote from desire;
The Light of the Morning
Heaven's mountains adorning:
In particles bright,
The Jewels of Light
Distinct shone and clear.
Amaz'd and in fear
I each particle gazèd,
Astonish'd, amazèd;
POEMS FROM LETTERS

For each was a Man
Human-form'd. Swift I ran,
For they beckon'd to me,
Remote by the sea,
Saying: 'Each grain of sand,
Every stone on the land,
Each rock and each hill,
Each fountain and rill,
Each herb and each tree,
Mountain, hill, earth, and sea,
Cloud, meteor, and star,
Are Men seen afar.'
I stood in the streams
Of Heaven's bright beams,
And saw Felpham sweet
Beneath my bright feet,
In soft Female charms;
And in her fair arms
My Shadow I knew,
And my wife's Shadow too,
And my sister, and friend.
We like Infants descend
In our Shadows on earth,
Like a weak mortal birth.
My eyes, more and more,
Like a sea without shore,
Continue expanding,
The Heavens commanding;
Till the Jewels of Light,
Heavenly Men beaming bright,
Appear'd as One Man,
Who complacent began
My limbs to infold
In His beams of bright gold;
Like dross purg'd away
All my mire and my clay.
Soft consum'd in delight,
In His bosom sun-bright
I remain'd. Soft He smil'd,
And I heard His voice mild,
Saying: 'This is My fold,
O thou Ram horn'd with gold,
Who awakest from sleep
On the sides of the deep.
On the mountains around
The roarings resound
Of the lion and wolf,
The loud sea, and deep gulph.
These are guards of My fold,
O thou Ram horn'd with gold!' And the voice faded mild:
I remain'd as a Child;
POEMS FROM LETTERS

All I ever had known
Before me bright shone:
I saw you and your wife
By the fountains of life.
Such the Vision to me
Appear'd on the sea.
TO MRS. BUTTS

Wife of the Friend of those I most revere,
Receive this tribute from a harp sincere;
Go on in virtuous seed-sowing on mould
Of Human Vegetation, and behold
Your Harvest springing to Eternal Life,
Parent of youthful minds, and happy wife!
WITH Happiness stretch'd across the hills
In a cloud that dewy sweetness distills;
With a blue sky spread over with wings,
And a mild Sun that mounts and sings;
With trees and fields full of Fairy Elves,
And little devils who fight for themselves—
Rememb'ring the verses that Hayley sung
When my heart knock'd against the root of my tongue—
With Angels planted in hawthorn bowers,
And God Himself in the passing hours;
With Silver Angels across my way,
And Golden Demons that none can stay;
With my Father hovering upon the wind,
And my Brother Robert just behind,
And my Brother John, the evil one,
In a black cloud making his moan;
Tho' dead, they appear upon my path,
Notwithstanding my terrible wrath—
They beg, they intreat, they drop their tears,
Fill'd full of hopes, fill'd full of fears—
POEMS FROM LETTERS

With a thousand Angels upon the wind,
Pouring disconsolate from behind
To drive them off, and before my way
A frowning Thistle implores my stay.
What to others a trifle appears
Fills me full of smiles or tears;
For double the vision my eyes do see,
And a double vision is always with me.
With my inward eye, ’tis an Old Man grey,
With my outward, a Thistle across my way.
‘If thou goest back,’ the Thistle said,
‘Thou art to endless woe betray’d;
For here does Theotormon lower,
And here is Enitharmon’s bower;
And Los the Terrible thus hath sworn,
Because thou backward dost return,
Poverty, envy, old age, and fear,
Shall bring thy Wife upon a bier;
And Butts shall give what Fuseli gave,
A dark black rock and a gloomy cave.’

I struck the Thistle with my foot,
And broke him up from his delving root.
‘Must the duties of life each other cross?
Must every joy be dung and dross?
Must my dear Butts feel cold neglect

187
Because I give Hayley his due respect?
Must Flaxman look upon me as wild,
And all my friends be with doubts beguil'd?
Must my Wife live in my Sister's bane,
Or my Sister survive on my Love's pain?
The curses of Los, the terrible Shade,
And his dismal terrors make me afraid.'

So I spoke, and struck in my wrath
The Old Man weltering upon my path.
Then Los appear'd in all his power:
In the Sun he appear'd, descending before
My face in fierce flames; in my double sight
'Twas outward a Sun, inward Los in his might.
'My hands are labour'd day and night,
And ease comes never in my sight.
My Wife has no indulgence given
Except what comes to her from Heaven.
We eat little, we drink less,
This Earth breeds not our happiness.
Another Sun feeds our life's streams,
We are not warmèd with thy beams;
Thou measurest not the Time to me,
Nor yet the Space that I do see;
My mind is not with thy light array'd,
Thy terrors shall not make me afraid.'
When I had my defiance given,
The Sun stood trembling in heaven;
The Moon, that glow'd remote below,
Became leprous and white as snow;
And every Soul of men on the earth
Felt affliction, and sorrow, and sickness, and dearth.
Los flam'd in my path, and the Sun was hot
With the Bows of my mind and the Arrows of thought.
My bowstring fierce with ardour breathes;
My arrows glow in their golden sheaves;
My brothers and father march before;
The heavens drop with human gore.

Now I a fourfold vision see,
And a fourfold vision is given to me;
'Tis fourfold in my supreme delight,
And threefold in soft Beulah's night,
And twofold always. May God us keep
From single vision, and Newton's sleep!
[TO THOMAS BUTTS]

O! WHY was I born with a different face?
Why was I not born like the rest of my race?
When I look, each one starts; when I speak, I offend;
Then I'm silent and passive, and lose every Friend.

Then my verse I dishonour, my pictures despise,
My person degrade, and my temper chastise;
And the pen is my terror, the pencil my shame;
All my Talents I bury, and dead is my Fame.

I am either too low, or too highly priz'd;
When elate I'm envied; when meek I'm despis'd.
THE PICKERING MS.

THE SMILE

THERE is a smile of Love,
And there is a smile of Deceit,
And there is a Smile of Smiles
In which these two smiles meet.

And there is a frown of Hate,
And there is a frown of Disdain,
And there is a Frown of Frowns
Which you strive to forget in vain,

For it sticks in the heart's deep core
And it sticks in the deep backbone;
And no smile that ever was smil'd,
But only one Smile alone,

That betwixt the Cradle and Grave
It only once smil'd can be;
And, when it once is smil'd,
There's an end to all Misery.
THE GOLDEN NET

THREE Virgins at the break of day:
'Whither, young man, whither away?
Alas for woe! alas for woe!'
They cry, and tears for ever flow.
The one was cloth'd in Flames of Fire,
The other cloth'd in Iron Wire,
The other cloth'd in Tears and Sighs
Dazzling bright before my eyes.
They bore a Net of golden twine
To hang upon the branches fine.
Pitying I wept to see the woe
That Love and Beauty undergo,
To be consum'd in burning fires
And in ungratified desires,
And in tears cloth'd night and day
Melted all my soul away.
When they saw my tears, a smile
That did Heaven itself beguile,
Bore the Golden Net aloft,
As on downy pinions soft,
THE PICKERING MS.

Over the Morning of my day.
Underneath the net I stray,
Now intreating Burning Fire,
Now intreating Iron Wire,
Now intreating Tears and Sighs—
O! when will the Morning rise?
THE MENTAL TRAVELLER

I
TRAVEL'D thro' a Land of Men,
A Land of Men and Women too;
And heard and saw such dreadful things
As cold Earth-wanderers never knew.

For there the Babe is born in joy
That was begotten in dire woe;
Just as we reap in joy the fruit
Which we in bitter tears did sow.

And if the Babe is born a Boy
He's given to a Woman Old,
Who nails him down upon a rock,
Catches his shrieks in cups of gold.

She binds iron thorns around his head,
She pierces both his hands and feet,
She cuts his heart out at his side,
To make it feel both cold and heat.
THE PICKERING MS.

Her fingers number every nerve,
Just as a miser counts his gold;
She lives upon his shrieks and cries,
And she grows young as he grows old.

Till he becomes a bleeding Youth,
And she becomes a Virgin bright;
Then he rends up his manacles,
And binds her down for his delight.

He plants himself in all her nerves,
Just as a Husbandman his mould;
And she becomes his dwelling-place
And Garden fruitful seventy-fold.

An Agèd Shadow, soon he fades,
Wandering round an earthly cot,
Full fillèd all with gems and gold
Which he by industry had got.

And these are the gems of the Human Soul,
The rubies and pearls of a love-sick eye,
The countless gold of the aking heart,
The martyr’s groan and the lover’s sigh.
THE PICKERING MS.

They are his meat, they are his drink;
He feeds the Beggar and the Poor
And the wayfaring Traveller:
For ever open is his door.

His grief is their eternal joy;
They make the roofs and walls to ring;
Till from the fire on the hearth
A little Female Babe does spring.

And she is all of solid fire
And gems and gold, that none his hand
Dares stretch to touch her Baby form,
Or wrap her in his swadling-band.

But she comes to the Man she loves,
If young or old, or rich or poor;
They soon drive out the agèd Host,
A Beggar at another's door.

He wanders weeping far away,
Until some other take him in;
Oft blind and age-bent, sore distrest,
Until he can a Maiden win.
And to allay his freezing Age,
The Poor Man takes her in his arms;
The Cottage fades before his sight,
The Garden and its lovely charms.

The Guests are scatter'd thro' the land,
For the eye altering alters all;
The senses roll themselves in fear,
And the flat Earth becomes a Ball;

The Stars, Sun, Moon, all shrink away,
A desart vast without a bound,
And nothing left to eat or drink,
And a dark desart all around.

The honey of her Infant lips,
The bread and wine of her sweet smile,
The wild game of her roving eye,
Does him to Infancy beguile;

For as he eats and drinks he grows
Younger and younger every day;
And on the desart wild they both
Wander in terror and dismay.
THE PICKERING MS.

Like the wild stag she flees away,
Her fear plants many a thicket wild;
While he pursues her night and day,
By various arts of love beguil’d;

By various arts of love and hate,
Till the wide desart planted o’er
With labyrinths of wayward love,
Where roam the lion, wolf, and boar.

Till he becomes a wayward Babe,
And she a weeping Woman Old.
Then many a Lover wanders here;
The Sun and Stars are nearer roll’d;

The trees bring forth sweet extasy
To all who in the desart roam;
Till many a City there is built,
And many a pleasant Shepherd’s home.

But when they find the frowning Babe,
Terror strikes thro’ the region wide:
They cry ‘The Babe! the Babe is born!’
And flee away on every side.
THE PICKERING MS.

For who dare touch the frowning form,
His arm is wither'd to its root;
Lions, boars, wolves, all howling flee,
And every tree does shed its fruit.

And none can touch that frowning form,
Except it be a Woman Old;
She nails him down upon the rock,
And all is done as I have told.
THE PICKERING MS.

THE LAND OF DREAMS

A WAKE, awake, my little Boy!
Thou wast thy Mother's only joy;
Why dost thou weep in thy gentle sleep?
Awake! thy Father does thee keep.

' O, what land is the Land of Dreams?
What are its mountains, and what are its streams?
O Father! I saw my Mother there,
Among the Lillies by waters fair.

'Among the lambs, clothèd in white,
She walk'd with her Thomas in sweet delight.
I wept for joy, like a dove I mourn;
O! when shall I again return?'

Dear Child, I also by pleasant streams
Have wander'd all night in the Land of Dreams;
But tho' calm and warm the waters wide,
I could not get to the other side.

'Father, O Father! what do we here
In this Land of unbelief and fear?
The Land of Dreams is better far,
Above the light of the Morning Star.'
MARY

SWEET Mary, the first time she ever was there,
Came into the ball-room among the fair;
The young men and maidens around her throng,
And these are the words upon every tongue:

‘An Angel is here from the heavenly climes,
Or again does return the golden times;
Her eyes outshine every brilliant ray,
She opens her lips—’tis the Month of May.’

Mary moves in soft beauty and conscious delight,
To augment with sweet smiles all the joys of the night,
Nor once blushes to own to the rest of the fair
That sweet Love and Beauty are worthy our care.

In the morning the villagers rose with delight,
And repeated with pleasure the joys of the night,
And Mary arose among friends to be free,
But no friend from henceforward thou, Mary, shalt see.
Some said she was proud, some call’d her a whore,
And some, when she passèd by, shut to the door;
A damp cold came o’er her, her blushes all fled;
Her lillies and roses are blighted and shed.

‘O, why was I born with a different face?
Why was I not born like this Envious race?
Why did Heaven adorn me with bountiful hand,
And then set me down in an Envious land?

‘To be weak as a Lamb and smooth as a Dove,
And not to raise Envy, is call’d Christian Love;
But if you raise Envy your merit’s to blame
For planting such spite in the weak and the tame.

‘I will humble my Beauty, I will not dress fine,
I will keep from the ball, and my eyes shall not shine;
And if any girl’s lover forsakes her for me
I’ll refuse him my hand, and from Envy be free.’

She went out in morning attir’d plain and neat;
‘Proud Mary’s gone mad,’ said the child in the street;
She went out in morning in plain neat attire,
And came home in evening bespatter’d with mire.
THE PICKERING MS.

She trembled and wept, sitting on the bedside,
She forgot it was night, and she trembled and cried;
She forgot it was night, she forgot it was morn,
Her soft memory imprinted with faces of Scorn;

With faces of Scorn and with eyes of Disdain,
Like foul fiends inhabiting Mary's mild brain;
She remembers no face like the Human Divine;
All faces have Envy, sweet Mary, but thine;

And thine is a face of sweet Love in despair,
And thine is a face of mild sorrow and care,
And thine is a face of wild terror and fear
That shall never be quiet till laid on its bier.
THE CRYSTAL CABINET

THE Maiden caught me in the wild,
Where I was dancing merrily;
She put me into her Cabinet,
And lock'd me up with a golden key.

This Cabinet is form'd of Gold
And Pearl and Crystal shining bright,
And within it opens into a World
And a little lovely Moony Night.

Another England there I saw,
Another London with its Tower,
Another Thames and other Hills,
And another pleasant Surrey Bower,

Another Maiden like herself,
Translucent, lovely, shining clear,
Threefold each in the other clos'd—
O, what a pleasant trembling fear!
O, what a smile! a Threefold Smile
Fill’d me, that like a flame I burn’d;
I bent to kiss the lovely Maid,
And found a Threefold Kiss return’d.

I strove to seize the inmost form
With ardour fierce and hands of flame,
But burst the Crystal Cabinet,
And like a Weeping Babe became—

A Weeping Babe upon the wild,
And Weeping Woman pale reclin’d,
And in the outward air again
I fill’d with woes the passing wind.
THE PICKERING MS.

AUGURIES OF INNOCENCE

To see a World in a Grain of Sand,
And a Heaven in a Wild Flower,
Hold Infinity in the palm of your hand,
And Eternity in an hour.

A Robin Redbreast in a cage
Puts all Heaven in a rage.
A dove-house fill'd with Doves and Pigeons
Shudders Hell thro' all its regions.
A Dog starv'd at his Master's gate
Predicts the ruin of the State.
A Horse misus'd upon the road
Calls to Heaven for Human blood.
Each outcry of the hunted Hare
A fibre from the Brain does tear.
A Skylark wounded in the wing,
A Cherubim does cease to sing.
The Game-Cock clipt and arm'd for fight
Does the Rising Sun affright.
Every Wolf's and Lion's howl
Raises from Hell a Human Soul.

208
The wild Deer, wandering here and there,
Keeps the Human Soul from care.
The Lamb misus'd breeds Public Strife,
And yet forgives the Butcher's knife.
He who shall hurt the little Wren
Shall never be belov'd by Men.
He who the Ox to wrath has mov'd
Shall never be by Woman lov'd.
The wanton Boy that kills the Fly
Shall feel the Spider's enmity.
He who torments the Chafer's Sprite
Weaves a Bower in endless Night.
The Catterpiller on the Leaf
Repeats to thee thy Mother's grief.
Kill not the Moth nor Butterfly,
For the Last Judgment draweth nigh.
He who shall train the Horse to war
Shall never pass the Polar Bar.
The Beggar's Dog and Widow's Cat,
Feed them, and thou wilt grow fat.

The Bat that flits at close of eve
Has left the Brain that won't believe.
The Owl that calls upon the night
Speaks the Unbeliever's fright.
The Gnat that sings his Summer's song
THE PICKERING MS.

Poison gets from Slander's tongue.
The poison of the Snake and Newt
Is the sweat of Envy's foot.
The poison of the Honey Bee
Is the Artist's Jealousy.
A Truth that's told with bad intent
Beats all the Lies you can invent.

Joy and Woe are woven fine,
A Clothing for the Soul divine;
Under every grief and pine
Runs a Joy with silken twine.
It is right it should be so;
Man was made for Joy and Woe;
And when this we rightly know,
Thro' the World we safely go.
The Babe is more than Swadling-bands;
Throughout all these Human lands
Tools were made, and born were hands,
Every Farmer understands.
Every Tear from every Eye
Becomes a Babe in Eternity;
This is caught by Females bright,
And return'd to its own delight.
The Bleat, the Bark, Bellow, and Roar
Are Waves that beat on Heaven's Shore.
THE PICKERING MS.

The Babe that weeps the Rod beneath
Writes Revenge in realms of Death.
He who mocks the Infant’s Faith
Shall be mock’d in Age and Death.
He who shall teach the Child to doubt
The rotting Grave shall ne’er get out.
He who respects the Infant’s Faith
Triumphs over Hell and Death.
The Child’s Toys and the Old Man’s Reasons
Are the Fruits of the Two Seasons.
The Questioner, who sits so sly,
Shall never know how to reply.
He who replies to words of Doubt
Doth put the Light of Knowledge out.
A Riddle, or the Cricket’s cry,
Is to Doubt a fit Reply.
The Emmet’s Inch and Eagle’s Mile
Make lame Philosophy to smile.
He who doubts from what he sees
Will ne’er believe, do what you please.
If the Sun and Moon should doubt,
They’d immediately go out.

The Prince’s Robes and Beggar’s Rags
Are Toadstools on the Miser’s Bags.
The Beggar’s Rags, fluttering in air,
THE PICKERING MS.

Does to Rags the Heavens tear.
The Poor Man’s Farthing is worth more
Than all the Gold on Afric’s shore.
One Mite wrung from the Lab’rer’s hands
Shall buy and sell the Miser’s lands;
Or, if protected from on high,
Does that whole Nation sell and buy.
The Soldier, arm’d with Sword and Gun,
Palsied strikes the Summer’s Sun.
The strongest Poison ever known
Came from Caesar’s Laurel Crown.
Nought can deform the Human Race
Like to the Armour’s iron brace.
When Gold and Gems adorn the Plow
To peaceful Arts shall Envy bow.
To be in a Passion you Good may do,
But no Good if a Passion is in you.
The Whore and Gambler, by the State Licensed, build that Nation’s Fate.
The Harlot’s cry from street to street
Shall weave Old England’s winding-sheet.
The Winner’s shout, the Loser’s curse,
Dance before dead England’s Hearse.

Every Night and every Morn
Some to Misery are born.

212
THE PICKERING MS.

Every Morn and every Night
Some are born to Sweet Delight.
Some are born to Sweet Delight,
Some are born to Endless Night.
We are led to believe a Lie
When we see not thro' the Eye,
Which was born in a Night, to perish in a Night,
When the Soul slept in Beams of Light.
God appears, and God is Light,
To those poor Souls who dwell in Night;
But does a Human Form display
To those who dwell in Realms of Day.
THE PICKERING MS.

WILLIAM BOND

I wonder whether the Girls are mad,
And I wonder whether they mean to kill,
And I wonder if William Bond will die,
For assuredly he is very ill.

He went to Church in a May morning,
Attended by Fairies, one, two, and three;
But the Angels of Providence drove them away,
And he return'd home in Misery.

He went not out to the Field nor Fold,
He went not out to the Village nor Town,
But he came home in a Black, Black Cloud,
And took to his bed, and there lay down.

And an Angel of Providence at his feet,
And an Angel of Providence at his head,
And in the midst a Black, Black Cloud,
And in the midst the Sick Man on his bed.

And on his right hand was Mary Green,
And on his left hand was his Sister Jane,
And their tears fell thro' the Black, Black Cloud
To drive away the Sick Man's pain.

214
THE PICKERING MS.

'O William, if thou dost another love,
Dost another love better than poor Mary,
Go and take that other to be thy Wife,
And Mary Green shall her Servant be.'

'Yes, Mary, I do another love,
Another I love far better than thee,
And Another I will have for my Wife;
Then what have I to do with thee?

'For thou art melancholy pale,
And on thy head is the cold Moon's shine,
But she is ruddy and bright as day,
And the Sunbeams dazzle from her eyne.'

Mary trembled and Mary chill'd,
And Mary fell down on the right-hand floor,
That William Bond and his Sister Jane
Scarce could recover Mary more.

When Mary woke and found her laid
On the right hand of her William dear,
On the right hand of his lovèd bed,
And saw her William Bond so near,

The Fairies that fled from William Bond
Dancèd around her Shining Head;
They dancèd over the Pillow white,
And the Angels of Providence left the bed.
I thought Love lived in the hot Sunshine,
But O, he lives in the Moony light!
I thought to find Love in the heat of Day,
But sweet Love is the Comforter of Night.

Seek Love in the Pity of others' Woe,
In the gentle relief of another's care,
In the Darkness of Night and the Winter's Snow,
In the naked and outcast, seek Love there!
MY SPECTRE AROUND ME NIGHT AND DAY

MY Spectre around me night and day
Like a wild beast guards my way;
My Emanation far within
Weeps incessantly for my Sin.—

‘A fathomless and boundless deep,
There we wander, there we weep;
On the hungry craving wind
My Spectre follows thee behind.

‘He scents thy footsteps in the snow,
Wheresoever thou dost go,
Thro’ the wintry hail and rain.
When wilt thou return again?

‘Dost thou not in Pride and Scorn
Fill with tempests all my morn,
And with Jealousies and Fears
Fill my pleasant nights with tears?
LATER POEMS FROM

‘Seven of my sweet Loves thy knife
Has bereavèd of their life.
Their marble tombs I built with tears,
And with cold and shuddering fears.

‘Seven more Loves weep night and day
Round the tombs where my Loves lay,
And seven more Loves attend each night
Around my couch with torches bright.

‘And seven more Loves in my bed
Crown with wine my mournful head,
Pitying and forgiving all
Thy Transgressions great and small.

‘When wilt thou return and view
My Loves, and them to life renew?
When wilt thou return and live?
When wilt thou pity as I forgive?’

‘O’er my Sins thou sit and moan:
Hast thou no Sins of thy own?
O’er my Sins thou sit and weep,
And lull thy own Sins fast asleep.
THE ROSSETTI MS.

'What Transgressions I commit
Are for thy Transgressions fit.
They thy Harlots, thou their slave;
And my bed becomes their Grave.

'Never, Never, I return:
Still for Victory I burn.
Living, thee alone I'll have;
And when dead I'll be thy Grave.

'Thro' the Heaven and Earth and Hell
Thou shalt never, never quell:
I will fly and thou pursue:
Night and Morn the flight renew.'—

'Poor, pale, pitiable Form
That I follow in a storm;
Iron tears and groans of lead
Bind around my aking head.

'Till I turn from Female Love
And root up the Infernal Grove,
I shall never worthy be
To step into Eternity.
LATER POEMS FROM

‘And, to end thy cruel mocks,
Annihilate thee on the rocks,
And another Form create
To be subservient to my Fate.

‘Let us agree to give up Love,
And root up the Infernal Grove;
Then shall we return and see
The worlds of happy Eternity.

‘And throughout all Eternity
I forgive you, you forgive me.
As our dear Redeemer said:
This the Wine, and this the Bread.’
MOCK ON, MOCK ON, VOLTAIRE, ROUSSEAU

Mock on, Mock on, Voltaire, Rousseau;
Mock on, Mock on; 'tis all in vain!
You throw the sand against the wind,
And the wind blows it back again.

And every sand becomes a Gem
Reflected in the beams divine;
Blown back they blind the mocking eye,
But still in Israel's paths they shine.

The Atoms of Democritus
And Newton's Particles of Light
Are sands upon the Red Sea shore,
Where Israel's tents do shine so bright.
I SAW A MONK OF CHARLEMAINE

I
SAW a Monk of Charlemaine
Arise before my sight:
I talk'd to the Grey Monk where he stood
In beams of infernal light.

Gibbon arose with a lash of steel,
And Voltaire with a racking wheel:
The Schools, in clouds of learning roll'd,
Arose with War in iron and gold.

'Thou lazy Monk,' they said afar,
'In vain condemning glorious War,
And in thy cell thou shall ever dwell.
Rise, War, and bind him in his cell!

The blood red ran from the Grey Monk's side,
His hands and feet were wounded wide,
His body bent, his arms and knees
Like to the roots of ancient trees.

224
THE ROSSETTI MS.

'I see, I see,' the Mother said,
'My children will die for lack of bread.
What more has the merciless Tyrant said?'
The Monk sat down on her stony bed.

His eye was dry, no tear could flow;
A hollow groan first spoke his woe.
He trembled and shudder'd upon the bed;
At length with a feeble cry he said:

'When God commanded this hand to write
In the studious hours of deep midnight,
He told me that all I wrote should prove
The bane of all that on earth I love.

'My brother starv'd between two walls;
Thy children's cry my soul appalls:
I mock'd at the rack and griding chain;
My bent body mocks at their torturing pain.

'Thy father drew his sword in the North;
With his thousands strong he is [marchèd] forth;
Thy brother has armèd himself in steel
To revenge the wrongs thy children feel.
LATER POEMS FROM

‘But vain the sword and vain the bow,
They never can work War’s overthrow;
The Hermit’s prayer and the Widow’s tear
Alone can free the world from fear.

‘The hand of Vengeance sought the bed
To which the purple Tyrant fled;
The iron hand crush’d the Tyrant’s head,
And became a Tyrant in his stead.

‘Until the Tyrant himself relent,
The Tyrant who first the black bow bent,
Slaughter shall heap the bloody plain:
Resistance and War is the Tyrant’s gain.

‘But the Tear of Love—and forgiveness sweet,
And submission to death beneath his feet—
The tear shall melt the sword of steel,
And every wound it has made shall heal.

‘For the Tear is an Intellectual thing,
And a Sigh is the Sword of an Angel King,
And the bitter groan of the Martyr’s woe
Is an Arrow from the Almighty’s Bow.’
MORNING

To find the Western path,
Right thro' the Gates of Wrath
I urge my way;
Sweet Mercy leads me on
With soft repentant moan:
I see the break of day.

The war of swords and spears,
Melted by dewy tears,
Exhales on high;
The Sun is freed from fears,
And with soft grateful tears
Ascends the sky.

THE BIRDS

He. WHERE thou dwellest, in what Grove,
Tell me Fair One, tell me Love;
Where thou thy charming nest dost build,
O thou pride of every field!

She. Yonder stands a lonely tree,
There I live and mourn for thee;
Morning drinks my silent tear,
And evening winds my sorrow bear.

He. O thou summer’s harmony,
I have liv’d and mourn’d for thee;
Each day I mourn along the wood,
And night hath heard my sorrows loud.

She. Dost thou truly long for me?
And am I thus sweet to thee?
Sorrow now is at an end,
O my Lover and my Friend!

He. Come, on wings of joy we’ll fly
To where my bower hangs on high;
Come, and make thy calm retreat
Among green leaves and blossoms sweet.

YOU DON'T BELIEVE

You don't believe—I won't attempt to make ye:
You are asleep—I won't attempt to wake ye.
Sleep on! Sleep on! while in your pleasant dreams
Of Reason you may drink of Life's clear streams.
Reason and Newton, they are quite two things;
For so the Swallow and the Sparrow sings.

Reason says 'Miracle': Newton says 'Doubt.'
Aye! that's the way to make all Nature out.
'Doubt, doubt, and don't believe without experiment':
That is the very thing that Jesus meant,
When He said 'Only believe! believe and try!
Try, try, and never mind the reason why!'
IF IT IS TRUE WHAT THE PROPHETS WRITE

If it is true what the Prophets write,
That the Heathen Gods are all stocks and stones,
Shall we, for the sake of being polite,
Feed them with the juice of our marrow-bones?

And if Bezaleel and Aholiab drew
What the finger of God pointed to their view,
Shall we suffer the Roman and Grecian rods
To compell us to worship them as gods?

They stole them from the Temple of the Lord
And worship'd them that they might make Inspirèd Art abhor

The Wood and Stone were call'd the Holy Things,
And their Sublime Intent given to their kings.
All the Atonements of Jehovah spurn'd,
And Criminals to Sacrifices turn'd.
WHY was Cupid a Boy,
And why a Boy was he?
He should have been a Girl,
For aught that I can see.

For he shoots with his bow,
And the Girl shoots with her eye,
And they both are merry and glad,
And laugh when we do cry.

Then to make Cupid a Boy
Was surely a Woman's plan;
For a Boy ne'er learns so much
Till he is become a Man.

And then he's so pierc'd with cares,
And wounded with arrowy smarts,
That the whole business of his life
Is to pick out the heads of the darts.

'Twas the Greeks' love of war
Turn'd Love into a Boy,
And Woman into a Statue of Stone—
And away fled every Joy.
I ROSE UP AT THE DAWN OF DAY

I ROSE up at the dawn of day—
‘Get thee away! get thee away!
Pray’st thou for Riches? Away! away!
This is the Throne of Mammon grey.’

Said I: This, sure, is very odd;
I took it to be the Throne of God.
For everything besides I have:
It is only for Riches that I can crave.

I have mental Joy, and mental Health,
And mental Friends, and mental Wealth;
I’ve a Wife I love, and that loves me;
I’ve all but Riches bodily.

I am in God’s presence night and day,
And He never turns His face away;
The Accuser of Sins by my side doth stand,
And he holds my money-bag in his hand.

THE ROSSETTI MS.

For my worldly things God makes him pay,
And he'd pay for more if to him I would pray;
And so you may do the worst you can do;
Be assur'd, Mr. Devil, I won't pray to you.

Then if for Riches I must not pray,
God knows, I little of Prayers need say;
So, as a Church is known by its Steeple,
If I pray it must be for other people.

He says, if I do not worship him for a God,
I shall eat coarser food, and go worse shod;
So, as I don't value such things as these,
You must do, Mr. Devil, just as God please.
THE CAVERNS OF THE GRAVE I'VE SEEN

The Caverns of the Grave I've seen,
And these I shew'd to England's Queen.
But now the Caves of Hell I view,
Who shall I dare to show them to?
What mighty Soul in Beauty's form
Shall dauntless view the infernal storm?
Egremont's Countess can controll
The flames of Hell that round me roll;
If she refuse, I still go on
Till the Heavens and Earth are gone,
Still admir'd by noble minds,
Follow'd by Envy on the winds,
Re-engrav'd time after time,
Ever in their youthful prime,
My Designs unchang'd remain.
Time may rage, but rage in vain.
For above Time's troubled Fountains,
On the great Atlantic Mountains,
In my Golden House on high,
There they shine Eternally.

[TO THE QUEEN

The Door of Death is made of Gold,
That Mortal Eyes cannot behold;
But when the Mortal Eyes are clos’d,
And cold and pale the Limbs repos’d,
The Soul awakes; and, wond’ring, sees
In her mild Hand the golden Keys:
The Grave is Heaven’s golden Gate,
And rich and poor around it wait;
O Shepherdess of England’s Fold,
Behold this Gate of Pearl and Gold!

To dedicate to England’s Queen
The Visions that my Soul has seen,
And, by Her kind permission, bring
What I have borne on solemn Wing,
From the vast regions of the Grave,
Before Her Throne my Wings I wave;
Bowing before my Sov’reign’s feet,
‘The Grave produc’d these Blossoms sweet
In mild repose from Earthly strife;
The Blossoms of Eternal Life!’]
POEMS FROM 'MILTON' AND 'JERUSALEM'
FROM 'MILTON'

AND did those feet in ancient time
Walk upon England's mountains green?
And was the holy Lamb of God
On England's pleasant pastures seen?

And did the Countenance Divine
Shine forth upon our clouded hills?
And was Jerusalem builded here
Among these dark Satanic Mills?

Bring me my Bow of burning gold!
Bring me my Arrows of desire!
Bring me my Spear! O clouds, unfold!
Bring me my Chariot of fire!

I will not cease from Mental Fight,
Nor shall my Sword sleep in my hand,
Till we have built Jerusalem
In England's green and pleasant Land.

To the Public

READER! . . . of books . . . of Heaven, And of that God from whom . . .
Who in mysterious Sinai's awful cave To Man the wondrous art of writing gave; Again He speaks in thunder and in fire, Thunder of Thought and flames of fierce Desire. Even from the depths of Hell his voice I hear Within the unfathom'd caverns of my Ear. Therefore I print: nor vain my types shall be. Heaven, Earth, and Hell, henceforth shall live in harmo
II

SUCH Visions have appear'd to me,
As I my order'd race have run:
Jerusalem is nam'd Liberty
Among the Sons of Albion.
To the Jews

The fields from Islington to Marybone,
To Primrose Hill and Saint John’s Wood,
Were builded over with pillars of gold;
And there Jerusalem’s pillars stood.

Her Little Ones ran on the fields,
The Lamb of God among them seen,
And fair Jerusalem, his Bride,
Among the little meadows green.

Pancras and Kentish Town repose
Among her golden pillars high,
Among her golden arches which
Shine upon the starry sky.

The Jew’s-harp House and the Green Man,
The Ponds where Boys to bathe delight,
The fields of Cows by William’s farm,
Shine in Jerusalem’s pleasant sight.

242
FROM 'JERUSALEM'

She walks upon our meadows green;
The Lamb of God walks by her side;
And every English Child is seen,
Children of Jesus and his Bride;

Forgiving trespasses and sins,
Lest Babylon, with cruel Og,
With Moral and Self-righteous Law,
Should crucify in Satan’s Synagogue.

What are those Golden Builders doing
Near mournful ever-weeping Paddington,
Standing above that mighty Ruin,
Where Satan the first victory won;

Where Albion slept beneath the fatal Tree,
And the Druid’s golden Knife
Rioted in human gore,
In Offerings of Human Life?

They groan’d aloud on London Stone,
They groan’d aloud on Tyburn’s Brook:
Albion gave his deadly groan,
And all the Atlantic Mountains shook.
FROM 'JERUSALEM'

Albion's Spectre, from his Loins,
Tore forth in all the pomp of War;
Satan his name; in flames of fire
He stretch'd his Druid Pillars far.

Jerusalem fell from Lambeth's Vale,
Down thro' Poplar and Old Bow,
Thro' Malden, and across the Sea,
In War and howling, death and woe.

The Rhine was red with human blood;
The Danube roll'd a purple tide;
On the Euphrates Satan stood,
And over Asia stretch'd his pride.

He wither'd up sweet Zion's Hill
From every Nation of the Earth;
He wither'd up Jerusalem's Gates,
And in a dark Land gave her birth.

He wither'd up the Human Form
By laws of sacrifice for Sin,
Till it became a Mortal Worm,
But O! translucent all within.
FROM 'JERUSALEM'

The Divine Vision still was seen,
Still was the Human Form Divine;
Weeping, in weak and mortal clay,
O Jesus! still the Form was Thine!

And Thine the Human Face; and Thine
The Human Hands, and Feet, and Breath,
Entering thro' the Gates of Birth,
And passing thro' the Gates of Death.

And O Thou Lamb of God! whom I
Slew in my dark self-righteous pride,
Art Thou return'd to Albion's Land,
And is Jerusalem Thy Bride?

Come to my arms, and nevermore
Depart; but dwell for ever here;
Create my Spirit to Thy Love;
Subdue my Spectre to Thy Fear.

Spectre of Albion! warlike Fiend!
In clouds of blood and ruin roll'd,
I here reclaim thee as my own,
My Selfhood—Satan arm'd in gold!
FROM 'JERUSALEM'

Is this thy soft Family Love,
Thy cruel Patriarchal pride;
Planting thy Family alone,
Destroying all the World beside?

A man's worst Enemies are those
Of his own House and Family;
And he who makes his Law a curse,
By his own Law shall surely die!

In my Exchanges every Land
Shall walk; and mine in every Land,
Mutual shall build Jerusalem,
Both heart in heart and hand in hand.

EACH Man is in his Spectre's power
Until the arrival of that hour
When his Humanity awake,

To the Deists

I SAW a Monk of Charlemaine
Arise before my sight:
I talk'd with the Grey Monk as we stood
In beams of infernal light.

Gibbon arose with a lash of steel,
And Voltaire with a racking wheel;
The Schools, in clouds of learning roll'd,
Arose with War in iron and gold.

'Thou lazy Monk!' they sound afar,
'In vain condemning glorious War;
And in your cell you shall ever dwell:
Rise, War, and bind him in his cell!'

The blood red ran from the Grey Monk's side,
His hands and feet were wounded wide,
His body bent, his arms and knees
Like to the roots of ancient trees.

248
FROM 'JERUSALEM'

When Satan first the black bow bent
And the Moral Law from the Gospel rent,
He forg'd the Law into a Sword,
And spill'd the blood of Mercy's Lord.

Titus! Constantine! Charlemaine!
O Voltaire! Rousseau! Gibbon! vain
Your Grecian Mocks and Roman Sword
Against this image of his Lord;

For a Tear is an Intellectual thing;
And a Sigh is the Sword of an Angel King;
And the bitter groan of a Martyr's woe
Is an Arrow from the Almighty's Bow.
VI

To the Christians

I GIVE you the end of a golden string;
Only wind it into a ball,
It will lead you in at Heaven's gate,
Built in Jerusalem's wall.
VII

To the Christians

ENGLAND! awake! awake! awake!
Jerusalem thy Sister calls!
Why wilt thou sleep the sleep of death,
And close her from thy ancient walls?

Thy hills and valleys felt her feet
Gently upon their bosoms move:
Thy Gates beheld sweet Zion’s ways;
Then was a time of joy and love.

And now the time returns again:
Our souls exult, and London’s towers
Receive the Lamb of God to dwell
In England’s green and pleasant bowers.

I AM no Homer's Hero you all know;
I profess not Generosity to a Foe.
My Generosity is to my Friends,
That for their Friendship I may make amends.
The Generous to Enemies promotes their ends,
And becomes the Enemy and Betrayer of his Friends.

ANGER and Wrath my bosom rends:
I thought them the Errors of Friends.
But all my limbs with warmth glow:
I find them the Errors of the Foe.

... AND his legs carried it like a long fork,
Reached all the way from Chichester to York,
From York all across Scotland to the sea;
This was a Man of Men, as seems to me.
Not only in his Mouth his own Soul lay,
But my Soul also would he bear away.
Like as a Pedlar bears his weary Pack,
So Stewhard's Soul he buckled to his back.
But once, alas! committing a mistake,
He bore the wretched Soul of William Blake
EPIGRAMS

That he might turn it into eggs of gold;
But neither back nor mouth those eggs could hold.
His under jaw drop'd as those eggs he laid,
And Stewhard's eggs are addled and decay'd.
The Examiner, whose very name is Hunt,
Call'd Death a Madman, trembling for the affront;
Like trembling Hare sits on his weakly paper
On which he used to dance and sport and caper.
Yorkshire Jack Hemp and Quibble, blushing daw,
Clap'd Death into the corner of their jaw,
And Felpham Billy rode out every morn,
Horseback with Death, over the fields of corn;
Who with iron hand cuff'd, in the afternoon,
The ears of Billy's Lawyer and Dragoon.
And Cur my lawyer, and Daddy, Jack Hemp's parson,
Both went to law with Death to keep our ears on.
For how to starve Death we had laid a plot
Against his price—but Death was in the pot.
He made them pay his price, alackaday!
He knew both Law and Gospel better than they.
O that I ne'er had seen that William Blake,
Or could from Death Assassinette wake!
We thought—alas, that such a thought could be!—
That Blake would etch for him and draw for me.
For 'twas a kind of bargain Screwmuch made
That Blake's designs should be by us display'd,
ON FRIENDS AND FOES

Because he makes designs so very cheap.
Then Screwmuch at Blake's Soul took a long leap.
'Twas not a Mouse. 'Twas Death in a disguise.
And I, alas! live to weep out my eyes.
And Death sits laughing on their Monuments
On which he's written 'Received the Contents.'
But I have writ—so sorrowful my thought is—
His epitaph; for my tears are aquafortis.
'Come, Artists, knock your head against this stone,
For sorrow that our friend Bob Screwmuch's gone.'
And now the Muses upon me smile and laugh
I'll also write my own dear epitaph,
And I'll be buried near a dyke
That my friends may weep as much as they like:
'Here lies Stewhard the Friend of all [Mankind;
He has not left one enemy behind.]'
FOR this is being a Friend just in the nick,
Not when he’s well, but waiting till he’s sick;
He calls you to his help; be you not mov’d
Until, by being sick, his wants are prov’d.

You see him spend his Soul in Prophecy:
Do you believe it a confounded lie,
Till some Bookseller, and the Public Fame,
Prove there is truth in his extravagant claim.

For ’tis atrocious in a Friend you love
To tell you anything that he can’t prove,
And ’tis most wicked in a Christian Nation
For any man to pretend to Inspiration.

WAS I angry with Hayley who us’d me so ill,
Or can I be angry with Felpham’s old Mill?
Or angry with Flaxman, or Cromek, or Stothard,
Or poor Schiavonetti, whom they to death bother’d?
Or angry with Macklin, or Boydell, or Bowyer,
Because they did not say ‘O what a beau ye are’?
At a Friend’s errors anger show,
Mirth at the errors of a Foe.
ON FRIENDS AND FOES

XXXI

HAVING given great offence by writing in Prose, I'll write in Verse as soft as Bartoloze.
Some blush at what others can see no crime in; But nobody sees any harm in Rhyming.
Dryden, in Rhyme, cries 'Milton only plann'd':
Every Fool shook his bells throughout the land.
Tom Cooke cut Hogarth down with his clean graving:
Thousands of connoisseurs with joy ran raving.
Thus, Hayley on his toilette seeing the soap,
Cries, 'Homer is very much improv'd by Pope.'
Some say I've given great provision to my foes,
And that now I lead my false friends by the nose.
Flaxman and Stothard, smelling a sweet savour,
Cry 'Blakified drawing spoils painter and engraver';
While I, looking up to my umbrella,
Resolv'd to be a very contrary fellow,
Cry, looking quite from skumference to center:
'No one can finish so high as the original Inventor.'
Thus poor Schiavonetti died of the Cromek—
A thing that's tied around the Examiner's neck!
This is my sweet apology to my friends,
That I may put them in mind of their latter ends.

Advice of the Popes who succeeded the Age of Raphael

DEGRADE first the Arts if you'd Mankind degrade,
Hire Idiots to paint with cold light and hot shade,
Give high price for the worst, leave the best in disgrace,
And with Labours of Ignorance fill every place.

II
On the great encouragement given by English Nobility and Gentry to Correggio, Rubens, Reynolds, Gainsborough,
Catalani, DuCrow, and Dilbury Doodle

AS the ignorant Savage will sell his own Wife
For a sword, or a cutlass, a dagger, or knife;
So the taught, savage Englishman, spends his whole Fortune
On a smear, or a squall, to destroy picture or tune;
And I call upon Colonel Wardle
To give these Rascals a dose of Caudle!
I ASKED my dear friend Orator Prig:
‘What’s the first part of Oratory?’ He said: ‘A great wig.’
‘And what is the second?’ Then, dancing a jig
And bowing profoundly, he said: ‘A great wig.’
‘And what is the third?’ Then he snored like a pig,
And, puffing his cheeks out, replied: ‘A great wig.’
So if a Great Painter with questions you push,
‘What’s the first part of Painting?’ he’ll say: ‘A Paint-brush.’
‘And what is the second?’ with most modest blush,
He’ll smile like a cherub, and say: ‘A Paint-brush.’
‘And what is the third?’ he’ll bow like a rush,
With a leer in his eye, he’ll reply: ‘A Paint-brush.’
Perhaps this is all a Painter can want;
But look yonder—that house is the house of Rembrandt!

'O DEAR Mother Outline! of wisdom most sage,
What’s the first part of Painting?’ She said: ‘Patronage.’
‘And what is the second, to please and engage?’
She frowned like a Fury, and said: ‘Patronage.’
‘And what is the third?’ She put off Old Age,
And smil’d like a Siren, and said: ‘Patronage.’

SIR JOSHUA praises Michael Angelo.
’Tis Christian mildness when Knaves praise a foe;
But ’twould be Madness, all the world would say,
Should Michael Angelo praise Sir Joshua—
Christ us’d the Pharisees in a rougher way.

CAN there be anything more mean,
More malice in disguise,
Than praise a Man for doing what
That Man does most despise?
Reynolds lectures exactly so
When he praises Michael Angelo.

To the Royal Academy

A STRANGE Erratum in all the editions
Of Sir Joshua Reynolds' Lectures
Should be corrected by the Young Gentlemen
And the Royal Academy's Directors.

Instead of 'Michael Angelo,'
Read 'Rembrandt'; for it is fit
To make mere common honesty
In all that he has writ.

Florentine Ingratitude

SIR JOSHUA sent his own Portrait to
The Birthplace of Michael Angelo,
And in the hand of the simpering fool
He put a dirty paper scroll,
And on the paper, to be polite,
Did 'Sketches by Michael Angelo' write.
The Florentines said: 'Tis a Dutch-English bore,
Michael Angelo's name writ on Rembrandt's door.'
The Florentines call it an English fetch,
For Michael Angelo never did sketch;
Every line of his has Meaning,
And needs neither Suckling nor Weaning.
'Tis the trading English-Venetian cant
To speak Michael Angelo, and act Rembrandt:
It will set his Dutch friends all in a roar
To write 'Mich. Ang.' on Rembrandt's door;
But you must not bring in your hand a Lie
If you mean that the Florentines should buy.
Giotto's Circle or Apelles' Line
Were not the work of Sketchers drunk with wine;
Nor of the City Clock's running . . . fashion;
Nor of Sir Isaac Newton's calculation.

THAT God is Colouring Newton does show,
And the Devil is a black outline, all of us know.
Perhaps this little Fable may make us merry:
A dog went over the water without a wherry;
A bone which he had stolen he had in his mouth;
He cared not whether the wind was north or south.
As he swam he saw the reflection of the bone.
‘This is quite Perfection—one Generalizing Tone!
Outline! There’s no Outline, there’s no such thing:
All is Chiaroscuro, Poco-pen—it’s all Colouring!’

‘A great deal better than I was before:
Those who taste Colouring love it more and more.’

Are painted by Madmen, as sure as a groat;
For the greater the Fool is the Pencil more blest,
As when they are drunk they always paint best.

When men will draw Outlines begin you to jaw them;
Madmen see Outlines and therefore they draw them.

The God of this World rag'd in vain:
He bound old Satan in his Chain,
And, bursting forth, his furious ire

Throughout the land He took his course,
And trac'd diseases to their source.
He curs'd the Scribe and Pharisee,

Upon his heart with Iron pen
He wrote ‘Ye must be born again.’
He was too proud to take a bribe;
He spoke with authority, not like a Scribe.
He says with most consummate Art
‘Follow Me, I am meek and lowly of heart,
As that is the only way to escape
The Miser’s net and the Glutton’s trap.
What can be done with such desperate Fools
Who follow after the Heathen Schools?
I was standing by when Jesus died;
What I call’d Humility, they call’d Pride.
He who loves his Enemies betrays his Friends.
This surely is not what Jesus intends;
But the Sneaking Pride of Heroic Schools,
And the Scribes’ and Pharisees’ virtuous Rules;
For He acts with honest, triumphant Pride,
And this is the cause that Jesus died.
He did not die with Christian ease,
Asking Pardon of His Enemies:
If He had, Caiaphas would forgive;
Sneaking submission can always live.
He had only to say that God was the Devil,
And the Devil was God, like a Christian civil;
Mild Christian regrets to the Devil confess
For affronting him thrice in the Wilderness;

He had soon been bloody Caesar's Elf,
And at last he would have been Caesar himself,
Like Dr. Priestly and Bacon and Newton—
Poor spiritual knowledge is not worth a button!—
For thus the Gospel Sir Isaac confutes:
'God can only be known by his Attributes;
And as for the In-dwelling of the Holy Ghost,
Or of Christ and his Father, it's all a boast
And pride, and vanity of the imagination,
That disdains to follow this world's fashion.'
To teach doubt and experiment
Certainly was not what Christ meant.
What was He doing all that time,
From twelve years old to manly prime?
Was He then Idle, or the less
About his Father's business?
Or was his wisdom held in scorn
Before his wrath began to burn
In Miracles throughout the land,
That quite unnerv'd the Seraph band?
If He had been Antichrist, Creeping Jesus,
He'd have done anything to please us;
Gone sneaking into Synagogues,
And not us'd the Elders and Priests like dogs;
But humble as a lamb or ass
Obey'd Himself to Caiaphas.

302
God wants not Man to humble himself:
That is the trick of the Ancient Elf.
This is the race that Jesus ran:
Humble to God, Haughty to man,
Cursing the Rulers before the People
Even to the Temple’s highest steeple,
And when He humbled Himself to God
Then descended the Cruel Rod.
‘If Thou humblest Thyself, Thou humblest Me.
Thou also dwell’st in Eternity.
Thou art a Man: God is no more:
Thy own Humanity learn to adore,
For that is My Spirit of Life.
Awake, arise to Spiritual Strife,
And Thy Revenge abroad display
In terrors at the Last Judgment Day.
God’s Mercy and Long Suffering
Is but the sinner to judgment to bring.
Thou on the Cross for them shalt pray,
And take Revenge at the Last Day.’
Jesus replied, and thunders hurl’d:
‘I never will pray for the World.
Once I did so when I pray’d in the Garden;
I wish’d to take with Me a Bodily Pardon.’

And thus He others' labour stole,
That He might live above controll.
The Publicans and Harlots He

WAS Jesus Chaste? or did He
Give any lessons of Chastity?
The Morning blushèd fiery red:
Mary was found in Adulterous bed;
Earth groan'd beneath, and Heaven above
Trembled at discovery of Love.
Jesus was sitting in Moses' Chair.
They brought the trembling woman there.
Moses commands she be ston'd to death.
What was the sound of Jesus' breath?
He laid his hand on Moses' Law;
The ancient Heavens, in silent awe,
Writ with Curses from pole to pole,
All away began to roll.
The Earth trembling and Naked lay
In secret bed of Mortal Clay;
On Sinai felt the Hand Divine
Pulling back the bloody shrine;
And she heard the breath of God,
As she heard by Eden's flood:
'Good and Evil are no more!
Sinai's trumpets cease to roar!
Cease, finger of God, to write!
The Heavens are not clean in Thy sight.
Thou art good, and Thou alone;
Nor may the sinner cast one stone.

Shall be beggars at Love's Gate.
What was thy love? Let Me see it;
Was it love or dark deceit?
'Love too long from me has fled;
'Twas dark deceit, to earn my bread;
'Twas covet, or 'twas custom, or
Some trifle not worth caring for;
That they may call a shame and sin
Love's Temple that God dwelleth in,
And hide in secret hidden shrine
The naked Human Form Divine,
And render that a lawless thing
On which the Soul expands its wing.
But this, O Lord, this was my sin,
When first I let these devils in,
In dark pretence to chastity
Blaspheming Love, blaspheming Thee,
Thence rose secret adulteries,
And thence did covet also rise.
THE EVERLASTING GOSPEL

My sin Thou hast forgiven me;
Canst Thou forgive my Blasphemy?
Canst Thou return to this dark Hell,
And in my burning bosom dwell?
And canst Thou die that I may live?
And canst Thou pity and forgive?’
Then roll’d the shadowy Man away
From the limbs of Jesus, to make them his prey,
An ever devouring appetite,
Glittering with festering Venoms bright;
Crying ‘Crucify this cause of distress,
Who don’t keep the secrets of holiness!
The Mental Powers by Diseases we bind;
But He heals the deaf, the dumb, and the blind.
Whom God has afflicted for secret ends,
He comforts and heals and calls them Friends.’
But, when Jesus was crucified,
Then was perfected his galling pride.
In three nights He devour’d his prey,
And still He devours the Body of Clay;
For Dust and Clay is the Serpent’s meat,
Which never was made for Man to eat.
SEEING this False Christ, in fury and passion
I made my Voice heard all over the Nation.
What are those . . .

I AM sure this Jesus will not do,

[On the Founder of the Charterhouse]

TO be or not to be
Of great capacity,
Like Sir Isaac Newton,
Or Locke, or Doctor South,
Or Sherlock upon Death—
I’d rather be Sutton!

For he did build a house
For aged men and youth,
With walls of brick and stone;
He furnish’d it within
With whatever he could win,
And all his own.
He drew out of the Stocks
His money in a box,
And sent his servant
To Green the Bricklayer,
And to the Carpenter;
He was so fervent.

The chimneys were threescore,
The windows many more;
And, for convenience,
He sinks and gutters made,
And all the way he pav’d
To hinder pestilence.

Was not this a good man—
Whose life was but a span,
Whose name was Sutton—
As Locke, or Doctor South,
Or Sherlock upon Death,
Or Sir Isaac Newton?
X

O, I SAY, you Joe,
Throw us the ball!
I've a good mind to go
And leave you all.
I never saw such a bowler
To bowl the ball in a tansy,
And to clean it with my hankercher
Without saying a word.

That Bill's a foolish fellow;
He has given me a black eye.
He does not know how to handle a bat
Any more than a dog or a cat:
He has knock'd down the wicket,
And broke the stumps,
And runs without shoes to save his pumps.
APPENDIX

XI

THERE'S Doctor Clash,
And Signor Falalasole,
O they sweep in the cash
Into their purse hole!
Fa me la sol, La me fa sol!

Great A, little A,
Bouncing B!
Play away, play away,
You're out of the key!
Fa me la sol, La me fa sol!

Musicians should have
A pair of very good ears,
And long fingers and thumbs,
And not like clumsy bears.
Fa me la sol, La me fa sol!

Gentlemen! Gentlemen!
Rap! Rap! Rap!
Fiddle! Fiddle! Fiddle!
Clap! Clap! Clap!
Fa me la sol, La me fa sol!

324
FROM THE 'ROSSETTI MS.'

I

I WILL tell you what Joseph of Arimathea
Said to my Fairy: was not it very queer?
'Pliny and Trajan! What! are you here?
Come before Joseph of Arimathea.
Listen patient, and when Joseph has done
'Twill make a Fool laugh, and a Fairy fun.'

II

THEN old Nobodaddy aloft
Farted and belchéd and cough'd,
And said 'I love hanging and drawing and quartering
Every bit as well as war and slaughtering.
Damn praying and singing,
Unless they will bring in
The blood of ten thousand by fighting or swinging.'

Then he swore a great and solemn oath:
'To kill the people I am loth;
But if they rebel, they must go to hell:
They shall have a Priest and a passing bell.'
WHEN Klopstock England defied,
Uprose William Blake in his pride;
For old Nobodaddy aloft
Farted and belch'd and cough'd;
Then swore a great oath that made Heaven quake,
And call'd aloud to English Blake.
Blake was giving his body ease,
At Lambeth beneath the poplar trees.
From his seat then started he
And turn'd him round three times three.
The moon at that sight blush'd scarlet red,
The stars threw down their cups and fled,
And all the devils that were in hell,
Answerèd with a ninefold yell.
Klopstock felt the intripléd turn,
And all his bowels began to churn,
And his bowels turn'd round three times three,
And lock'd in his soul with a ninefold key; . . .
Then again old Nobodaddy swore
He ne'er had seen such a thing before,
Since Noah was shut in the ark,
Since Eve first chose her hellfire spark,
Since 'twas the fashion to go naked,
Since the old Anything was created. . . .
IV

On the virginity of the Virgin Mary and Johanna Southcott

WHATE’ER is done to her she cannot know,
And if you’ll ask her she will swear it so.
Whether ’tis good or evil none’s to blame:
No one can take the pride, no one the shame.

V

WHEN a Man has married a Wife, he finds out whether
Her knees and elbows are only glued together.

VI

. . . AND in melodious accents I
Will sit me down, and cry ‘I! I!’

VII

The Washerwoman’s Song

I WASH’D them out and wash’d them in,
And they told me it was a great sin.
APPENDIX

VIII

WHEN you look at a picture, you always can see
If a Man of Sense has painted he.
Then never flinch, but keep up a jaw
About freedom, and 'Jenny sink awa'.'
As when it smells of the lamp, we can Say all was owing to the Skilful Man;
For the smell of water is but small:
So e'en let Ignorance do it all.

IX

THOSE verses were written by a very envious man,
Who whatever likeness he may have to Michael Angelo
Never can have any to Sir Jehoshuan.
Long John Brown and Little Mary Bell

LITTLE Mary Bell had a Fairy in a nut,
Long John Brown had the Devil in his gut;
Long John Brown lov'd little Mary Bell,
And the Fairy drew the Devil into the nutshell.

Her Fairy skip'd out and her Fairy skip'd in;
He laugh'd at the Devil, saying 'Love is a Sin.'
The Devil he raged, and the Devil he was wroth,
And the Devil enter'd into the Young Man's broth.

He was soon in the gut of the loving Young Swain,
For John ate and drank to drive away Love's pain;
But all he could do he grew thinner and thinner,
Tho' he ate and drank as much as ten men for his dinner.

Some said he had a Wolf in his stomach day and night,
Some said he had the Devil, and they guess'd right;
The Fairy skip'd about in his Glory, Joy and Pride,
And he laugh'd at the Devil till poor John Brown died.

Then the Fairy skip'd out of the old nutshell,
And woe and alack for pretty Mary Bell!
For the Devil crept in when the Fairy skip'd out,
And there goes Miss Bell with her fusty old nut.
